8 Divinely Ordered Detour: How Ellen White Made it to Camp Meeting

Rowena Rick

On May 30, 1889, as Ellen White was boarding a train to Pennsylvania, the railroad city of Johnstown, Pa., was about to be destroyed by a massive flood. Thousands would lose their lives. See how the Lord intervened and spared her life so that she could make it to camp meeting.

In 2000, Potomac Conference members endured a soggy, rainy camp meeting. The deluge was so heavy that their tent actually collapsed on the Sabbath worshippers. See how the Lord protected everyone and prevented what could have been a tragedy.

Passionate for Jesus

just returned from Strasburg, Pa., where we experienced a spiritually refreshing weekend. More than 300 local church leaders, along with their pastors, gathered for inspiration, training, and to celebrate the Pennsylvania Conference's annual Hispanic Lay Festival.

The testimonies of lay missionaries like Dinorah Peña were the best part. She and her husband, Wilfredo, were baptized in 2004; their miraculous journey to our church is amazing. The short version is that she went to the Dominican Republic to die because of a serious illness. On her deathbed she promised to serve the Lord if He would heal her. "But please guide me to Your true church because I don't know how to find it," she praved.

After her miraculous healing, she moved to Reading, Pa. Her prayers were answered when Julio and Jaqueline Narvaez, a faithful Adventist couple, moved in next door. They invited her to some of the special events at their church, but she refused to accept for fear of becoming part of a cult.

One day Jacqueline showed her how the Bible answers our inquiries. From that moment, Dinorah At the recent festival where I met her, Dinorah brought Maria Alvarez and her young daughter.

became an insatiable student of Scripture. After months of daily and intense Bible studies she asked for baptism. On February 14, 2004, she was born again and since that time has become a very successful soul winner. If somebody dares to get in her way, she will do everything to share Jesus with them. Maria is one example of how Dinorah's passion for Christ enables her to use every opportunity to win souls. One day Maria went to Dinorah's house and asked her to watch her daughter while she went to a doctor's appointment. Dinorah was apprehensive, but realized that God may have brought Maria's request for a purpose. "Lord," she prayed, "I promise that I won't stop until [Maria] becomes your disciple." Six months later Maria gave her heart to the Lord and was baptized. She is one of 13 people Dinorah has brought into the Adventist Church.

But Dinorah isn't satisfied; she continues to passionately work for the Lord. Every Sabbath afternoon at her house, she gives Bible instruction to more than 14 children. At the same time the adults and young people enjoy their own small group service.

WHAT COULD HAPPEN?

Could it be that passion is one of the most important elements needed to complete the work the Lord has entrusted to us? What could happen if every believer (members and leaders alike) became a burning light filled with Jesus' love for the lost, like Dinorah? The reality is that only six percent of church leaders confess to being passionate about their ministry.¹

Christianity was founded on the greatest passionate act—self-sacrifice. Church history shows that this same passion was the key behind the early church success, the revivals, and the reformation. What moved our pioneers was their passion to encounter the Lord and prepare people for His second coming.

I strongly believe the gospel will be preached to all and the great commission accomplished by men and women filled with Jesus' passion for the lost. Are you one of them?

Virginia Tech Students Pray After Massacre

In the wake of the massacre that killed nearly three dozen students and teachers and shook the campus of Virginia Tech, in Blacksburg, Va., Adventists gathered to pray for those affected and thank God for His protection. The prayer meeting was organized by Friends Adventist Christian Fellowship, an official campus ministry led by Sylvia Grove, a student and member of the Radford (Va.) church. Students from Virginia

Tech and nearby Radford University and New River Community College, were joined by members and pastors from area Adventist churches. This photo was taken by Christopher Rawlins and captures the spirit of those in attendance.

Washington Adventist Hospital to Relocate

Adventist HealthCare (AHC) recently purchased land to relocate Washington Adventist Hospital (WAH), as part of its Vision for Expanded Access initiative. WAH's new home will be located near the White Oak section of Maryland's Montgomery County, approximately six miles from its current site in Takoma Park. The 48-acre site, off Plum Orchard Drive and Cherry Hill Road, will be accessible from Route 29 and the Capital Beltway.

While planning for its future site-a process that will take several years-WAH officials will continue to make investments and purchase new equipment for the current 285-bed facility. "Maintaining an outstanding level of quality care and service remains a priority for everyone," said hospital president Iere Stocks.

Founded in 1907 as the Washington Sanitarium with proceeds from Ellen White's book The Ministry of Healing, the facility was on the underdeveloped outskirts of the nation's capital. "Today, Montgomery and Prince George's counties are first and second in terms of Maryland population," says Stocks. "Times have changed and Washington Adventist Hospital must change as well."

William G. "Bill" Robertson, president and CEO of Adventist HealthCare, agrees. "We cherish our 100-year tradition of playing an integral role in the region's healthcare safety net."

Mountain View Evangelism Initiative Begins

About 35-40 nightly guests stopped by the Brier Inn, in Lewisburg, W.Va., for a two-week seminar series recently. Coordinated by the Lewisburg Adventist Church, this event kicked off the Mountain View Conference's "Tell the World-Tell Them Now" cooperative evangelism initiative. Dave Weigley, Columbia Union Conference president, was the speaker for this inaugural session.

"Our goal was to create a network of quality interests that the pastor and laypeople can nurture and guide to make decisions for baptism," Weigley says.

New Jersey Satellite Series Reaps Harvest

"Tell it to Your World: The King is Coming" was the theme lite series. The two-week event originated from the New Jersey Conference and was aired around the world on the Esperanza and 3ABN television networks and some radio stations.

At the uplink site in Vineland, N.J., more than 200 people were baptized during the series, preached by José Cortés (above, right), executive secretary for the Conference. "The people didn't want the meetings to stop. They said, 'Let's keep going for another week," he reports. "It was a beautiful experience watching them accept Jesus."

Unity Pervades Chesapeake Session

n spite of competition from the weather—it was the first beautiful Sunday this spring— Chesapeake delegates packed the Spencerville church in Silver Spring, Md., last month, for their Second Quinquennial Session.

Conference president Rob Vandeman welcomed nearly 500 delegates with a challenge: "We come together today to do serious work. We come in confidence that God is in control and that He will see to it that decisions made today will continue to move forward His work in this territory," he said.

In his president's report, Vandeman asked three questions: Where have we been? Where are we now? Where are we headed? He shared highlights of the conference agenda since 2002 and then cast some of his vision for the conference's future. The delegates sent a strong statement of affirmation for conference leadership and for the direction the conference is headed by returning all three officers.

In addition, they voted several significant changes to their bylaws: The midterm meeting will be replaced by a series of district town hall meetings. The K-12 Board of Education's bylaws were rescinded; it will now fall under the direct authority of the Conference Executive Committee with terms of reference. The Conference Executive Committee was enlarged from 19 to 21 members.

The following two recommendations were also approved for further study with proposals to be brought back to the next regular (or specially convened) constituency meeting: 1. To investigate the possible merger of the Conference (the ministry focus) and the Association (the corporation) into one entity.

Newsline

2. To study the possible collaboration between Highland View Academy (HVA) and Mt. Aetna Elementary School in developing a K-12 program with a boarding component. "The likelihood of this merger is uncertain at this time and will be to an important degree based upon HVA's ability to maintain or increase its dormitory enrollments," Vandeman told delegates.

A remarkable spirit of unity pervaded the meeting, and Vandeman closed the session by thanking attendees for their confidence in conference leadership, soliciting their prayers, and asking that all personal agendas be put aside in order to pursue the agenda of the Holy Spirit.—Frank Bondurant

Delegates returned all three officers—president Rob Vandeman (with Judy), executive secretary Charles Griffin (with Evelyn), and treasurer Ramon Chow (with Elizabeth)—to office for the 2007-2012 term.

How Ellen White Made it to Camp Meeting

Rowena Rick

t was Thursday, May 30, 1889, and hundreds of people crowded the streets of Johnstown, Pa., enjoying the Memorial Day festivities. Johnstown, built around the railroad industry, was a very prosperous city. Little did the residents know that their lives would soon change forever. Within the next 24 hours, most of the city was destroyed by floodwaters, and more than 2,200 individuals lost their lives.

That same evening, Ellen White (pictured) and a traveling companion, Sara McEnterfer, boarded a train in Battle Creek, Mich. Their destination was Williamsport, Pa., where a camp meeting was to begin on Tuesday, June 4. They were scheduled to arrive in Williamsport the next afternoon, Friday, May 31, at 5 p.m. Their route most likely included trains from Chicago to Toledo, Cleveland, and the Pennsylvania cities of Pittsburgh, Johnstown, and Altoona. From there they would change trains heading north to Williamsport.

Due to difficulty in crossing the Allegheny Mountains, the main route passed through Johnstown, where the trains picked up "helper" engines to aid in pulling the load over the mountains.

History records May 1889 as the very wettest month on record at that point. And right after the Memorial Day parade, the rains started again in earnest. In fact, the wet weather system seemed to stall over this area. The old city of Johnstown was located in a valley surrounded by mountains, with two rivers flowing through the city. An empty bucket set outside on the night of May 30 contained eight inches of water the next morning, and it was still raining.

As White and McEnterfer traveled toward Pennsylvania, they had no idea what was taking place in Johnstown—at least there seems to be no record of a divine revelation to White.

"One Big Push"

Johnstown had suffered many floods throughout its history, but in 1889 another peril-the South Fork Dam-presented itself.

one of the mountains near Johnstown, had risen two feet and was continuing to rise at the rate of 10 to 12 inches per hour. South Fork was originally built and used by the railroad, but for many years it sat idle. It was sold and resold, and finally became the property of the South Fork Hunting and Fishing Club, an aristocratic resort for the wealthy in 1879. The owners had started repairing the dam, but, unfortunately, used inferior materials such as hay, leaves, manure, and whatever they could find. Some safety features, such as the iron sluice pipes, had been removed and were trains arriving on the Johnstown tracks at 3 p.m. not replaced. They also installed wire fencing at the overflow to keep the fish from escaping, and this caused clogging. Johnstown residents knew about the shoddy workmanship and complained, but nothing was done. After awhile they forgot about the danger.

By Friday morning, the dam, located on top of

Then came the heavy rains of 1889. The water began to rise perilously. On Friday morning, a few men at the dam saw that it would soon break. One man hopped onto a horse and rode to the nearest telegraph office. History records that three different messages were telegraphed to Johnstown. But those who saw the alerts did not take them seriously and failed to spread the alarm. No doubt they recalled previous warnings about the dam when no break had ever occurred.

At 3:15 p.m., one end of the dam gave way. "The dam did not break," observers said. "It simply moved away. ... The whole dam seemed to push out all at once. Not a break, just one big push."

As the torrents gushed out, a 30- to 40-foot wall of water cascaded down the mountainside at about 40 miles per hour.

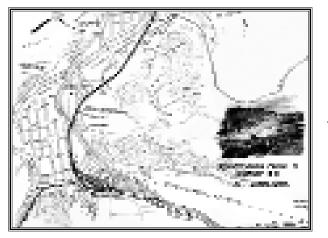

In some places lakes were formed by the mountain curves and fallen timber, but soon the buildup of water would break open the stoppage and the big waves formed again. It took less than 45 minutes to empty the main lake, which was about three miles long, one mile wide, and some 50 ft. deep.

In the direct path of the wave were the Johnstown railroad yards, where three passenger trains, 33 locomotives, and several freight cars were parked. The force of the water pushed one locomotive 4,800 ft., killing many passengers. The deluge continued and reached the city at about 4:10 p.m., killing hundreds more and leaving a watery wake of destruction.

Divine Intervention

Where was Ellen White when the dam broke? Because she boarded a train on Thursday evening, calculations would have put her on one of the

But God knew of the impending danger and had a solution—an impassable bridge between Pittsburgh and Johnstown. This problem was due to heavy rain and not the breaking of the South Fork Dam, which came later in the day. When her train reached Pittsburgh, it could not get through to Johnstown where the deadly destruction would soon take place.

So what did White do? According to Arthur White's book The Lonely Years, p. 430, she and McEnterfer took another train to Elmira, N.Y., and tried to buy a ticket to Williamsport, Pa. When that didn't work, they purchased tickets to Canton, Pa., which is about 40 miles from Williamsport. At Canton they booked a hotel over the Sabbath.

Arthur White describes their next travels in these words:

"Determined to get through, Ellen and Sara put their heads together and left no stones unturned in their attempts to find a way. Traveling by carriage part of the way and walking part of the way, they compassed the forty miles in four days. At one point they waited for three hours as, at their direction, a raft was constructed upon which to ferry the carriage in which they traveled across a swiftly flowing stream. A small boat pulled it across, the horses swam the stream, and the two lady travelers were rowed across. Then they continued their journey by horse and carriage."

When the pair finally reached Williamsport, they were told that the camp meeting had been flooded out and the tents taken down. But upon their arrival at the campsite, they found that the tents had been moved to higher ground and the camp meeting was still in progress. Although she arrived late, White was able to speak 13 times at this Pennsylvania camp meeting.

As she was leaving Williamsport, White penned these words: "We left Williamsport, Pa., June 12, for Rome, N.Y. We were glad to leave the flooded district. As I looked at the ruins from the car windows, and as I read the harrowing details of the destruction of human life at Johnstown, I could but think of the greater disasters that are yet to come upon the world. As the restraining power of the Holy Spirit shall be withdrawn, because of the impenitence and ingratitude of men, terrible things will be witnessed in the earth." Sadly, her words have come true numerous times in the years since. But in spite of life's ongoing tragedies, God's hand and divine providence are still present. Just as He protected White and her companion enroute to camp meeting so long ago, He continues to care for His people. "And we know that all things work together for good to those who love God, to those who are called according to His purpose" (Rom. 8:28, NKJV).

Down Came the Rain __and the Tent

A Camp Meeting Miracle

t had been raining all week and Sabbath, June 17, 2000, was no exception. Potomac Conference Camp Meeting worshippers gathered for services under their big tent on the campus of Shenandoah Valley Academy in New Market, Va. Other than enduring the sogginess, everything went well during the morning service.

The afternoon session, however, was another matter as things took a turn for the worse. "My daughter Peggy Jean [Lee] and I were at the afternoon meeting," remembers Peggy Lee, secretary/treasurer of the Columbia Union Revolving Fund (CURF), who's only missed one Potomac camp meeting in 44 years. "We were listening to a message by Harold Lee, who was Columbia Union president at the time.

"It started raining harder, and we could see the top of the tent buckling over our heads," continues Peggy, who attends the Hyattsville (Md.) church. "At first we hesitated to move, or leave, since our boss was speaking," she smiled. But they eventually made their way to the fringes of the tent.

"It was raining furiously," confirms Harold Lee. I saw that the tent was not going to withstand the force of the water so, without creating a panic, I gently closed the service and alerted those on the platform that we needed to get out."

TRAGEDY AVERTED

"Then the back left portion of the tent started coming down," explains Peggy Jean, CURF assistant

The response, based on surveys prepared by vice president for administration Roger Weiss, was overwhelmingly positive. Notwithstanding the pleasant weather this time, members seemed to appreciate the genuine "camp meeting feeling" that a tent provides. treasurer. "A few seconds later it came down completely. Then the left side came down and, finally, the right side. The few who weren't able to get out immediately crouched under the chairs to avoid the poles coming down on them," she said.

As he was exiting the tent, Harold Lee fell and lost his glasses. "The miracle," he says, chuckling, "was that no one was seriously hurt." Although there were a few minor injuries, the Lord's watch care kept the tent's poles-and water weightfrom crushing anyone.

According to Jeanie Allen, conference communication assistant, "The pastors and administrators sprang into action, formed a line, and systematically held up the canvas to find and assist people." Kurt Allen, vice president of finance, made sure that the electricity was shut down.

Even though this occurred during the Sabbath, when the crowds were largest, the rain may have actually kept more people from attending the afternoon service. This, according to Peggy Jean, was another blessing. "The fact that everyone remained calm was also amazing," she remembers. Once outside, attendees crowded onto the porch of the girls' dormitory as fire engines and ambulances drove across the muddy campus to assist and rescue those left inside. "A few were taken to the hospital to make sure they were okay," added Peggy. "We also made the evening news; I saw the story on TV. Later, we teased Elder Lee about 'bringing down the tent' with his dynamic message!"

Touching Those in Need

"... Go out quickly to the streets and alleys of the town and bring in the poor, the crippled, the blind and the lame" (Luke 14:21, NIV).

That is the world like today? What are the needs of those around us? These are a sample of the questions the people who make up Grandview Medical Center (GVMC) ask themselves every day. Our focus, since we opened our doors in 1926, has been to give whole-body care to all those who are in need. This was not a new concept then, and it isn't today, but that focus on caring for the healthcare needs of our surrounding communities has never changed. Today, more than ever before, there is a need for help in the inner cities of our society. Dayton is no different, and Grandview Medical Center has redoubled its efforts to make a positive difference in the lives of Daytonians.

Realizing that the needs of those around us are constantly growing, GVMC expanded by opening the Victor J. Cassano Health Center. It was located so that the medically underserved had easy access to the doctors and nurses who work there. Over the past three years, the number of clients has increased as more people have learned of the high quality care and service given at the health center.

Sisters in Service

The ability to provide quality healthcare hasn't been confined to GVMC or its outpatient facilities. That level of service, commitment. and quality also extends to Southview Hospital. This sister facility to GVMC was built to meet the growing demands of the increasing population south of Dayton. Staffed with committed physicians, nurses, and support staff, Southview also addresses the physical, mental, and spiritual needs of those who pass through its doors. Moreover, it has continued to extend and branch out through the addition of the Joslin Diabetes Center, which is nationally recognized for its leading role in diabetes research, treatment, and education.

As Grandview and its many skilled employees have moved through this year, we have seen the guiding hand of the Master Healer touching lives through our efforts. We have been given the opportunity to encourage the sick and suffering. This is our mission; this is our desire.

Daddy's Little Girl

Youth Services Provides Compassionate Care

can't begin to tell you how proud we are of Mary.* She was standing next to the casket of her father, greeting funeral guests with grace, composure, and beauty. Mary was quite a contrast to her father, lying in state and decked out—as he would prefer—in his favorite Cleveland Browns sweatshirt.

This would be quite a task for any 16-year-old. But Mary isn't just any 16-year-old. She was at her father's funeral on a pass from our youth facility, the Kettering Hospital Youth Services.

We refer to Kettering Hospital Youth Services as KHYS. One of the five hospitals in Kettering Adventist HealthCare, it is located on Lamme Road, in Dayton. KHYS is an inpatient and outpatient psychiatric treatment facility for children and youth from ages 4 through the teens. It is one of only a few such hospitals in Ohio. KHYS is a difficult, but essential, part of our business and calling.

And KHYS has been essential for Mary.

Mary came to us for treatment of depression and other emotional problems. She was Daddy's little girl, but Daddy and Mom were divorced—and Mom was now remarried. Mary was the only girl in a family of five children. She reacted to the news of her father's death as anyone might—with an aching sadness and sessions of seemingly unending tears.

But something else soon began to emerge, something that showed Mary's progress. She began to make plans for her father's funeral. While her mother wanted to protect Mary from such duties, our therapists believed that it would be important for Mary to take an active role in as many aspects of her father's memorial service as possible.

Why the Browns sweatshirt? Because he was an avid Browns fan. So avid, in fact, that some of Mary's best memories were of game days when she, her brothers, and her father would all dress in their Browns shirts, eat their game-day dinner, and sit together in the family room to cheer for their favorite football team. Mary was working through her memories in a very constructive manner.

Her caregivers at KHYS watched closely as she prepared for her father's funeral. Our hearts went out to this hurting girl. Hours of listening, loving, and monitoring prepared Mary for this enormous challenge.

Our chaplain, Rick LaVenture, her psychiatrist, and other KHYS caregivers had walked with Mary through the deep waters of her life. Chaplain LaVenture went to the funeral to assure Mary of the thoughts and prayers of her extended family at KHYS. He hardly recognized her. He was accustomed to seeing Mary in her hospital attire, which consisted of patient scrubs, her hair pulled back severely, and a blanket around her shoulders. Mary always had a blanket around her shoulders. But before him was a beautiful young woman who no longer needed the blanket. She greeted him with a hug.

Mary still has a way to go. Although she has experienced a lot of pain, she now has a wonderful chance in life because of the compassionate care of the KHYS staff. Mary is one more reason why we're here.

Youth Volunteers Make a Difference

t's a win-win situation. While students are getting a first-hand taste of working in the healthcare industry, the departments and patients at Dayton's Grandview Medical Center are benefiting from their actions.

Beginning last fall, the first 13 students from the Improved Solutions for Urban Systems (ISUS) Healthcare Institute started working as volunteers at Grandview. One group helps out in the morning and another group comes in the afternoon. When they aren't in the hospital, they are working in their newly renovated building across the street learning healthcare skills in the classroom.

"They have given us well over 1,500 volunteer hours this school year, and it's been a huge help," said Grandview Volunteer Services manager Sharon Kiser. "It is really working out well."

The students have assisted in the radiology and linen departments, surgery holding, surgery waiting, the eve clinic, and other areas. "I have two ISUS students in surgery waiting," said staff member Gloria Sanders. "They interact with the families and give them directions and updates. Both of them are really motivated, willing to help, and always wearing a smile," she notes. "And that's a little unusual for kids that young."

On the Right Track

Cynthia McCloud is one of Sanders' ISUS volunteers in the surgery waiting area. She is on track to begin classes at nearby Sinclair Community College in May. McCloud feels that the past several months at Grandview have been a valuable sneak preview into healthcare. This experience has given her the determination to pursue her dream of becoming a dentist.

"When I came in I was thinking I would like to become a surgeon, but I realized it wasn't for me when I got to see certain parts of surgery," McCloud admits. "Here at the hospital I get hands-on experience, and I get to meet the doctors. I love helping people, and this place just makes my day perfect. I wouldn't change it for the world."

Mark Floro, director of the Victor J. Cassano Center. also appreciates the ISUS volunteers. "The students have developed their computer and communication skills and professionalism through daily patient interactions," he said. "They are smart, quick to learn, and eager to help. ISUS is really doing a great job." At the beginning of 2006 we had a 30 percent patient no-show rate at Cassano Center," Floro added. "The students have been sending out postcards a week before, and calling patients the day before, to remind them of their appointments. Now we are down to a 15.8 percent no-show rate."

YOUR HEALING MINISTRY

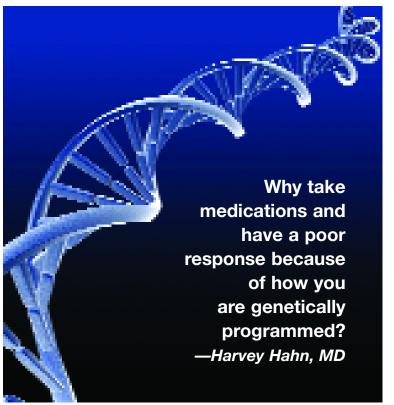

We serve a large uninsured population," continues Floro, "And the demand for appointments is high, so it's important to reduce the no-show rate so we can help more people. These kids are doing important work."

Kettering Joins Genetic Study

Kevin Lavoie

Inderstanding a blueprint is the key to constructing a building, and it may also be the key to proper treatment of heart disease. Researchers at Kettering Medical Center (KMC) are taking part in a study to determine if people will respond differently to heart medications, depending upon their differing DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid) makeup.

KMC, collaborating with the University of Cincinnati, is part of a $19.9 million, five-year Specialized Clinical Center of Research study looking at the interaction of genes and heart disease. This study is one of only five such projects funded by the federal government's National Institutes of Health, and aims to make heart care more effective through DNA profiling.

It is now known that many genetic variations determine how well patients will respond to specific treatments. This new field of research is called pharmacogenomics and helps explain why some people have a great response to a blood pressure medication, while others have almost no response, or, worse yet, some have side effects.

"Genetics is an emerging field in medical diagnosis and treatment," said Harvey Hahn, MD, a cardiologist and principal investigator for KMC's participation in the study. "Everyone is different and a big reason is your genes. In the future, by knowing a patient's genetic profile, we hope to custom tailor their medical program to maximize benefit and minimize potential side effects and cost," he states. "Why take medications and have a poor response because of how you are genetically programmed?"

"Kettering Medical Center is already a leader in stroke research, as well as having a clinical trial for Alzheimer's disease, and research on the benefits of advanced medical imaging," says Rick Mace, vice president for Clinical Affairs at KMC. "Now we are looking into the link between genetic makeup and congestive heart failure. Like our other research efforts, we think this will greatly benefit the health of people in our community, and around the nation, for years to come."

Suzanne Coleman, director of the Office of Research at KMC, is pleased with the joint venture. "It is exciting for us to work on this study with the University of Cincinnati and other prestigious research centers. Together we will gather significant findings to enhance our understanding of genetics' role in the development and treatment of cardiovascular disease. Since August 2006," she continues, "we have already enrolled more than 50 patients from our community who will participate in this important research."

Welcome

This is the 61st year for having camp meeting on our campgrounds. We have experienced many wonderful moments and have seen the Spirit of God do some amazing things. We witnessed a giant steel tent pole fall into a group of 125 children and not one was injured. We have listened to testimonies of individuals who have met and fell in love with Christ. We have each had our own personal experiences; however, we have yet to have Pentecost. After Jesus' resurrection, He told the disciples in Jerusalem to " ... wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me. For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence" (Acts 1:4-5). Shortly thereafter, Pentecost followed. We have chosen as our theme this year, "Spirit of the Living God, Fall Afresh on Me! If Not Me, Who? If Not Now, When?" We are looking for the Holy Spirit to visit us this year. The Spirit of

Welcome

To commemorate our conference's 40th anniversary, the theme for camp meeting this year is "Driven By a Vision-One More River to Cross." Our purpose will be to not only reflect on the blessings of the past, but also to remind ourselves of what God expects of us in the future.

Perhaps the greatest challenge facing our churches is not the lack of money, but a lack of focus on what exactly is our mission. This has caused us to become ineffective. Our mission has been and will continue to be the proclamation of the gospel to a dying world. It is in our mission that we find our most profound satisfaction, and the direct line to the power that can only come from God. This mission cannot be accomplished without God.

I know that the programming and speakers will richly bless you. We will review previous challenges that God has helped us overcome, as well as future obstacles that, by faith, God will provide what is necessary to stay "on mission."

Welcome

Please take advantage of the spiritual feast being prepared for you this year. Our theme "To Know Him-To Make Him Known" underlines two core issues in our lives as Adventist Christians. Fundamental to all we are and do is our personal relationship with Christ. Nothing else matters if we are not connected to Him. Yet once we are in a dynamic relationship with Christ, it becomes our greatest desire to share Him with others (see Steps to Christ, p. 78).

It is a challenge for us to keep these in balance. When our devotional life lacks refreshment, it is often an indication that there has been no genuine expression of our faith in service. And when we become so exhausted in our service that we want to call it quits, it is a good indication that we have not fed our spirit with genuine worship. Life must always be lived in the creative tension of worship and witness. May this camp meeting help us find greater balance, and may the n Mountain View, the phrase "camp meeting" brings thoughts of regeneration of the soul and reunion with church members from around the conference. It also brings opportunity to get acquainted with world church leaders. It's a time when we can study God's Word and pray for a closer walk with Jesus.

MOUNTAIN VIEWPOINT

Our theme this year, "Tell Your World—Now!" is designed to help us sense the urgency of the times in which we live. A time that calls for a stronger relationship with Christ, which will lead and empower us to do greater service in our communities, and which will hasten the day of His return.

Many of you will choose during the year to make camp meeting your vacation. For others, it's an established tradition. Regardless of the path that leads you there, we'll all be there for one reason-to know more of Jesus.

Potomac People

Welcome

am looking forward to my first Potomac Conference Camp Meeting, Some of my earliest and fondest memories of camp meeting include listening to stories by Adventist authors Josephine Cunnington Edwards and Eric B. Hare. That was quite awhile back, but as I have reviewed the schedules. there are some things that haven't changed. Camp meeting is a time for spiritual inspiration and fellowship. It is a time to pray together, to remember that the God of the universe has a special message for a special time, and to direct our focus on Jesus. It is a time to be reminded of our mission, that we are to be "salt" and "light."

This year's theme is "Watch, Ye Saints." The word "watch" for some conjures up an image of inactivity, but in the spiritual context it is active. It implies we are to watch and focus on Jesus, evidenced by how we portray His grace to others and wherever we live out our lives. Are you in need of spiritual renewal? Come and discover ne of the most incredible stories about Jesus occurred in the upper room with His disciples (John 13). When Jesus started to wash the feet of the disciples, they were not sure how to respond. Finally Peter protested. How could Jesus, God's only Son-God Himself-take on the role of a servant and wash his feet? First he asked, and then he insisted that Jesus not do this. When Jesus explained that Peter could have no part with Him unless He washed his feet, Peter was all for it. Jesus is our highest example of a servant leader.

Finding opportunities to serve others is a passion we seek to cultivate at Blue Mountain Academy (BMA). Each year we dedicate two school days to providing service to the community. Students clean, file, scrape, paint, and interact with young and old.

On a recent weekend, each of our tour groups—Aerial Aires, La Sonnette, and Bel Canto—spent several hours assisting businesses in Carnegie, Pa. They then performed a free concert for the community at the Andrew Carnegie Music Hall. It was a first, combining a performance tour with a service opportunity, and we plan to continue the practice.

During spring break, 58 students participated in mission trips to Brazil or Ecuador. During these service experiences, our students are challenged to serve as Jesus did. The question we want them to answer is. "How can I add value to the people I serve?" Jesus said in Mark 10:43-45. "... whoever wants to become great among you must be your servant, and whoever wants to be first must be slave of all. For even the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve ..." We have no greater example of adding value to others than Jesus himself. Adding value to others. Learn it at BMA, experience it for eternity.

Mourning Their Passing: Harold and Virginia Shobe

A nyone who has spent any time at Blue Mountain Academy will remember Harold and Virginia Shobe (pictured), faithful members of the BMA church. Harold and Virginia moved to Hamburg in 1958 so that their children could attend the academy. In the years that followed. their five children and four of their grandchildren attended the school. Harold and Virginia were faithful members and volunteers at the church, the academy, and the elementary school. They gave of their time, their means, and their multiple talents. Last May, Virginia passed away after a fall. The Shobes had been married nearly 64 years, and the loss for Harold was enormous. He continued to attend church and enjoy his family and friends as long as he could; however, his loneliness for his life's companion was evident.

On February 23. Harold "Grandpa" Shobe passed to his rest at home, surrounded by his loving family. We praise the Lord for the influence of Harold and Virginia on the BMA community. Their faithfulness to God and to each other was exemplary.

Students, Staff, Community Give Gift of Life

∧ t a time when the blood supply was running seriously low in the area, ABMA held a blood drive that netted 32 units. This was the fifth year that the school has held a blood drive on campus.

The Miller-Keystone Blood Center, which supplies blood for hospitals in Berks and Lehigh counties in Pennsylvania, and as far away as Hackettstown, N.J., are always grateful for BMA's response.

Not only do needy patients benefit from the donation, but also the young people are being educated about the importance of contributing to a healthy blood supply. The response is encouraging, as all shapes, sizes, and ages roll up their sleeves and steel themselves for the "prick." many for the first time. We hope that early education will make blood donation a habit for our healthy, Christian young people.

Golf Produces High-Tech Swing at BMA

Every spring BMA alumni sponsor a golf tournament at a nearby course. It is a time to visit with old friends and compete for prizes, as well as make donations to enhance the school's educational program. The proceeds from the 2005 and 2006 tournaments were used recently to purchase a SMART Technologies system for the math/physics classroom.

SMART Boards are electronic white boards that provide touch-screen computer control, allowing the instructor to access a computer and the Internet for live class presentations. Theoretically, this electronic board replaces the traditional chalkboard, and several departments at BMA have installed them.

For the math/physics department, however, the loss of the chalkboards is not an option. Sometimes nothing beats a chalkboard for developing concepts and equations. There are problems in pre-calculus and physics that more than fill the three existing slate boards. It is necessary to see the entire problem and to be able to erase or modify the calcium carbonate errors.

But technology has caught up to the slate boards in the form of a SMART Technologies Sympodium. The Sympodium is a full-size computer display with a special pen. It sits quietly beside the computer and links it to the video projector, allowing the same access to the computer and Internet as does a SMART Board. Live, online presentations can be made without losing the traditional chalkboards, giving the best of both worlds in presenting information.

Money raised from the golf tournament covered the purchase of the complete system: Sympodium, Dell computer, NEC video projector, and the very large screen to project the images. We can now show videos and DVD's, as well as all the useful calculators found on the Internet, and the venerable TI-86 graphing calculator used in math and physics classes.-Cary Corbin the delight of parents, family, and friends, 44 Columbia Union College (CUC) students were recently selected for membership into the Alpha Chi and Phi Eta Sigma honor societies. The induction ceremony for the 2007-08 academic year was held last month.

"I'm proud of the students. You don't casually become a member of one of these societies," said Selma Chaij Mastrapa, associate director for the Center for Learning Resources. "You have to be intentional about it and put forth effort and discipline."

Phi Eta Sigma is the national honor society for freshman, and Alpha Chi is the presence of Academic Dean for juniors and seniors. Both societies require dedication to academics. During the inductions, Mastrapa reminded students of the qualities they should embody as members, such as an unimpeachable character, a healthy body, and a well-disciplined mind.

"These ceremonies help act as a catalyst to encourage students to move forward in scholarship and spirituality," said Fitzroy Thomas, director of the center and co-sponsor of the event.

CUC chemistry professor Melvin Roberts gave the keynote address and shared a few personal experiences with the students. He encouraged them to seek God's guidance in everything that they do, using Proverbs 3:5-6 to illustrate his point.

"Mr. Robert's speech was really invigorating," said Phi Eta Sigma vice president John Allen, freshman health fitness major. "It made me think about my future. I feel that I can do anything with God's help, and that I can learn from others and teach others as well."

The honors induction program occurs every school year, during the spring semester.—Alexis Goring

New Alpha Chi member Tybee Wall, a Political Studies/Pre-Law major, accepts her membership certificate from Selma Chaij Mastrapa, assistant director for the Center for Learning Resources.

"This partnership provides donors with an alternative to traditional giving to assist their alma mater in producing unrestricted, consistent revenues to strengthen the quality of education at the college," said Bryan Zervos, director of development for the Office of Advancement.

MissionFish was created in 2003 and works as an online giving tool to accept and process donations from individuals who sell items through eBay Inc. This new venture will benefit current students and assist with the mission of the college. The donations can be set up at the time a seller creates a new auction. "This service adds to our ability to accept and process gifts of any kind," said Leroy Cain, a strong supporter of CUC's new venture and member of the college's Founders and Visionaries Society. "It works for everyone who has used eBay to sell items, and those who haven't. We hope this will encourage people to take advantage of this convenient process."—Marketing & Communication Staff

Bryan Dent, a freshman business major, accepts the invitation into Phi Eta Sigma from Selma Chaij Mastrapa in Robert Young.

New Online Giving Method Established

Vou know all that stuff in the closet or garage you've wanted to sell on eBay? Here is one more good reason to do it. Columbia Union College, in partnership with MissionFish-a service of the Points of Light Foundation-has become a participant in the charitable giving online marketplace. Through this partnership, friends, alumni, and constituents can donate a percentage of their sales from online auctions directly to CUC.

Artwork Unveiled in Richards Hall

The Department of Religion recently unveiled two paintings by artist Jeremy Satterlund for display in the H.M.S. Richards Hall lobby. The two, 10-foot paintings on canvas are titled "Hovering Above" and "Moving Upon."

Classified as abstract expressionism, the paintings depict two interpretations of the same act described in Genesis 1:2, when God first moved upon the void in the act of creation. "These incredible gifts are the result of passion-passion for beauty, passion for reflection, and passion for the interaction of life, culture, and theology," said CUC president Randal Wisbey, DMin.

Religion professor and department chair Zdravko Plantak, PhD, commissioned the large abstract works during an in-class discussion with the artist. He hopes the paintings "challenge the viewer to develop deeper understandings of the interplay between mind, body, and spirit."

The paintings were made possible through the generous support of private donors-including college professors, administrators, and students-Adventist HealthCare, and friends of the department.-PR Staff was recently re-reading The Story of Redemption by Ellen G. White. The first several chapters lay out so clearly the simplicity of God's desires for us. On page 24 the author states, "This tree was especially designed of God to be the pledge of their obedience, faith, and love to Him." These attributes-obedience, faith, and love—all flow from one place, our heart. He wants our heart. He could have created Adam and Eve to love Him without any choice in the matter. Instead, He created free moral agents, and, in so doing, gave each one of us the power to choose the owner of our heart.

My challenge to each one of us is to truly give Him our heart. It is easy to give Him other "things" as a substitute. These substitutes take many forms. Some may give Him their career, others their money, and still others their fame. These are all wonderful gifts and can be a tremendous blessing to His work, but none of these gifts satisfy His one desire-our heart. Pause right now for a "heart checkup." Are you giving Him what He really wants?

SAA Hosts Academy Day

Potential high school students experience life at SAA during its annual Academy Day.

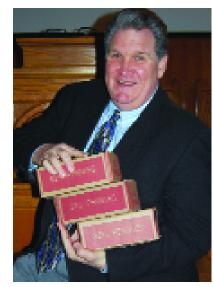

Sixty-eight potential high school students recently spent a day at Spencerville Adventist Academy during their annual Academy Day. The students participated in a variety of activities planned to give them an idea of what high school life is like at SAA. During the special day, the visitors participated in worship, tours, had the opportunity to try out for scholarships, and got acquainted with new friends. After lunch they were treated to a gymnastics program, as well as performances by the choir, band, bells, and drama. The day was capped off by a basketball game between current SAA students and guests. We look forward to welcoming the new students next school year.

Students Wage War on HIV/Aids

pencerville Adventist Academy's High School Student Council recently started the Spencerville Penny War, which functioned as both a fund-raiser and a contest between classes. Each class tried to see who could collect the most money in pennies, with each penny worth one point. Quarters, nickels, and dimes canceled out the pennies and added a level of strategy to the game. If a student placed coins other than pennies in the container of another class, it would take points away from the penny points. A class wins the Penny War either by having the most points or by raising the most money.

SAA partnered with Hope For Humanity with funds going to benefit the Maluti Adventist Hospital in Lesotho. About the size of Maryland, Lesotho is a kingdom located in South Africa with a population of 2 million people. Lesotho has been devastated by the HIV/AIDS epidemic. The disease affects about 23 percent of the population that is more than 15 years of age. Profits from the Penny War will go to help Maluti Adventist Hospital with its AIDS intervention projects, Wellness Center project, and Impoverished Children's Fund.

In addition to collecting coins for the projects, students at SAA had special assemblies with speakers representing Maluti Hospital. Speakers included Allan Handysides, Maluti's former medical director and current Health Ministries director for the Seventh-day Adventist Church; Pastor Richard Nystrom, a Peace Corps volunteer who worked at the hospital; and Maitland DiPinto, director of Hope For Humanity. A video about Maluti, Lesotho, and the Penny War was produced for the school.

The thousands of coins collected for the Penny War were taken to a bank in Burtonsville. Md., for counting. Counting the coins took all day! The results of the Penny War were revealed the next day. The total raised was $1,275.51including 81,813 pennies!

The first prize was awarded to the class with the most number of pennies after subtracting the value of the other coins that were in their bottle. This distinction went to the junior class. Second prize was awarded to the class with the most pennies plus the value of the other coins in their bottle. This distinction went to the sophomore class.

DiPinto announced to the student body that the money raised would be matched dollar for dollar with other monies available from Hope For Humanity, and that $2,551.02 would be given to Maluti Adventist Hospital for a special new fund to be established to assist impoverished children.

Already the project's influence is starting to spread. The Chesapeake Conference and North American Division are considering it a model for other schools in Maryland,

Students, Staff, Volunteers Blessed by Mexico Trip

Senior Valerie Moselev gives the children's story during one Sabbath of the Mexico mission trip.

During spring break, 40 students and seven staff from Shenandoah Valley Academy (SVA) were joined by four Tennessee public school students, their pastor, and 15 adults on an international adventure. The group traveled to the tropical city of Papantla in the state of Vera Cruz. Mexico.

During the eight-day trip, the students assisted the attending health professionals with medical, dental, and chiropractic services. They also joined adults in visiting homes, schools, and prisons to provide personal, educational, and spiritual ministry to the local people.

Other students worked on teams assisted by the local residents to roof two unfinished churches and build another church. Other students helped to build more than 30 pews for area churches.

seniors Sean Smith, Jonathan Brvan, David Ramsdale, and Caleb Norris preached sermons. Other students directed a VBS program for two churches. Children and adults from the local community flooded the events. Everyone was blessed-those served, as well as those who served.

Music Department Travels Europe

Would you enjoy visiting the birthplace of Mozart, walking across a 600-year-old stone bridge, and visiting famous scenes from the movie The Sound of Music? The SVA Music Department experienced this and much more during their spring break trip to Europe.

For 11 days, 15 students from the SVA choir toured through Austria and the Czech Republic, visiting famous historical sites in Vienna, Prague, and Salzburg. Highlights of the trip included a concert by the Czech Philharmonic, walking through ancient salt mines, singing in several cathedrals, and enjoying Sabbath worship with local Adventists in Prague.

SVA senior Sean Hsu especially enjoyed the performance by the philharmonic, where the students got to sit behind the performers. "Watching the conductor from the perspective of the musicians, we could observe cues and other gestures that normally would not be visible to the audience," he fondly remembers.

Fulfilling Duties of Sharing Christ

t has been a good year, and soon we will bid farewell to 72 seniors. The greatest desire of the Takoma Academy (TA) staff is for each student to catch a "glimpse" of the Jesus each of us knows, and to make the decision to accept Him totally into their lives. What an awesome responsibility. Satan is busy attacking the divinity of Jesus Christ, and it will only continue to get worse. We need to make sure that Jesus is presented positively, and to encourage students to develop a relationship with Him. Evangelism must begin at home and continue through school. This will assure that our church remains strong and anxious for Jesus to come.

Tae Kwan Do Teaches Respect

TA students are fortunate to have Anthony Medley, co-associate pastor of the Capital Hill church in Washington, D.C., leading out in a very special class every Tuesday, Thursday, and Sunday. Students learn principles of control and respect by learning Tae Kwon Do from a Christian perspective. Students may also receive physical education credit for taking this course.

Graduation Lineup Planned

raduation weekend this year will be full of bless-Cings. The Consecration Service on June 1 will start at 7 p.m. at Sligo church in Takoma Park, Md. Senior class pastor Josh Limerick will consecrate the class to the glory of God. A dedication to the parents will follow.

y grandson is passionate about ice hockey. His parents do not need to bribe him to watch a hockey game or nag him to go play street hockey with the neighborhood boys. They wish he was equally passionate about cleaning his room and practicing the piano, but I guess a 7-year-old boy will be a 7-year-old boy.

WHAT ARE YOU PASSIONATE ABOUT?

Monte Sahlin, who wrote this column for years, is passionate about urban ministry. Just ask him about a big city in our union, and he can pull out charts and tables to tell you about their needs. Our union president, Dave Weigley, is passionate about public evangelism. He still loves to conduct meetings and just finished one in West Virginia.

Community Action Council.

Some members of the Spencerville church in Silver Spring, Md., felt that "someone" should help the homeless in Washington, D.C., have a good lunch. They now serve sack lunches on Sabbath. While delivering lunches, one of the teenage volunteers noticed the need for warm clothing and felt that "someone" should make scarves and caps to give the homeless during the winter. She decided that "someone" could be her, so she invited the women in the church to attend knitting sessions and the "Keep in Stitches" program was born. It is amazing to see what happens when a person thinks "someone should ...," catches the vision, and discovers their passion. I believe the Holy Spirit plants those "someone should ... " ideas into the minds of those He is calling to do that very assignment. Of course, our first thought is that someone else should do the task. But the next time you think "someone should ...," I challenge you to listen to God's voice speaking to you, accept the assignment, and see what God will do through you. Trust me, it's exciting and rewarding to discover that the "someone" is really you.

Edward Motschiedler (emotschiedler@columbiaunion.net) serves the Columbia Union Conference as special assistant to the president and director of the Christian Leadership Center.

EDWARD MOTSCHIEDLER

When "Someone" is You

I have come to believe that one's passion could be discovered by the words "I think someone should" Let me explain: For years I felt that more Adventists should be involved in community organizations. I found a website that lists the volunteer organizations in Howard County, Maryland (where I live), and discovered scores of organizations that were looking for help. I am now that "someone" and serve on the board of the Howard County excellence is no accident...
