IMAGES OF CREATION

The LORD has done this, and it is marvelous in our eyes.
PSALM 118:23 (NIV)

“View Toward Glacier Park” by Bob Rittenhouse of Ellensburg, Wash.

It's All About Life

Last month I shared how I was privileged, early on in my ministry, to share Wednesday afternoons with Mel Rees. Around his dining room table I learned some “big ideas” about stewardship. These are ideas I still believe in and remember. The first big idea is — God owns everything. I am always only a manager of those resources — never their owner.

The second big idea I learned is an equation which says time + talent = life. When a person is born, God gives them two things — a measure of time and a measure of talent. Time and talent are the essential tools of stewardship. Note that money is not included in that equation.

In a simple society time and talent would be all we needed. Bartering would exchange resources when necessary. Yet time and talent have a critical limitation. They cannot be stored nor transported easily. Time past is time gone, and talents are useful only in the present. And that's where money comes to the rescue. In our complex society a man who is not a builder can use his time and talents in a job he is able to convert into money which he can store until he has enough for the home he wants built. Money must be regarded for what it is — a compound of time and talent, useful only as a medium of exchange.

Imagine yourself resting beside a sparkling mountain stream in the bottom of a deep gorge near a high mountain. You feel something crinkle in your shirt pocket and discover a twenty dollar bill. You take it out and look at it from an entirely new vantage point. Before you can use that twenty dollar bill you have to hike up the side of the mountain for two and one half hours. Then you must drive over a rough Forest Service road for sixty-seven miles. When you finally reach the junction with the main highway there is a little store where this twenty dollar bill can be used.

This brings us to the most important point about money. To be valuable, money must be reconverted into its original components. It must be reconverted into time and talent (or a product which represents time and talent) before it is useful again.

When a Christian steward places a gift of money in the offering plate, he is in reality placing a portion of his life there — that portion expended in producing the money. If one does not wish to give money to the Lord's cause, he really does not wish to give his life. The basis of Christianity is the entire life belongs to God — even the portion represented by money. Someone has said money is life done up in a convenient package for storage and use.

With the proper regard for money, one may go to a mission field without ever leaving home. As money is sent to further the gospel in foreign lands, it is actually a portion of the life of the giver, which is converted into the time and talents of the missionary. A Christian steward can use his or her time and talent for God in the community, then with the aid of money, labor vicariously all over the world.

What a thrilling prospect. What a great privilege and honor. Every time we give a financial gift we are giving a part of ourselves — it is truly an act of worship. •

Churches Will Target Haiti Relief February 6

Many of the 470 churches Haiti's Adventist members worship in are now in ruins.

A special offering for "Haiti Disaster Relief (SDA)" will be taken on Sabbath, February 6, throughout the North American Division. Instead of ADRA funds which must be used for general needs, this offering will go directly to help devastated Adventist churches and members in Haiti.

ADRA and other Adventist agencies are mobilized in and around Port-au-Prince. Adventist groups have traveled from the Northwest and beyond to help. Go to gleaneronline.org for updated information.

New Hope Channel Show Features Healing Hope

Lonnie Melashenko is hosting Healing Hope which launched on the Hope Channel on Jan. 2. He is assisted by Becky Wang, former Lifestyle Magazine physician. It airs each Saturday at 4 p.m., Monday at 1:30 p.m., Tuesday at 4 p.m., and Thursday at 7 p.m. (listings are all Pacific Standard Time). The program's goal is to show personal transformations which happen when the Great Physician and faith-based medicine join together.

Healthy Heart Clarification

The January GLEANER article about Healthy Heart Teams from Portland-area churches doing health screenings in large chain stores led to a potential misunderstanding. In order to do these events, interested church groups must become part of the Healthy Heart Team. I will get to the point. Why is the NPUC wasting financial resources by spending money on sending out The Great Controversy to members? I am not alone in this question. We already have many copies and do not need another. I am not sure what the goal of this was. However well meaning, we have so many greater needs. This is just another reason on the list of why members have a hard time giving generous support to the church.

Cynthia, via e-mail

Well, put your mind at rest — no NPUC funds were used for this project. It was entirely underwritten by a generous donor ... and here's why.

When Jere Patzer was North Pacific Union Conference president he had a dream of updating the Bible verses in The Desire of Ages from the King James to the New King James version to help young people better understand Mrs. White's classic volumes. Other partners joined in: the Pacific Press, Lightbearers Ministries, artist Darrel Tank and MCM Design Studio. In December 2006 each NPUC family received a copy of the New King James Version of The Desire of Ages. The following Easter, we also sent a copy to more than 12,000 Northwest clergy members.

One of the donors who helped with the project shared a special interest about doing a special type of update for The Great Controversy. Even though Jere Patzer passed away, this gracious donor resolved to far surpass what had been originally envisioned. With his generous gift, the Pacific Press was able to not only print enough to send to each of the 43,000 Adventist families on the GLEANER list, but also an additional 157,000 for distribution around the world by Adventist Book Centers and Lightbearers Ministries.

So, if you can't use it, we hope you will prayerfully share it with someone else who will be blessed by reading it at an especially opportune time in our world's history.

My husband and I just received the updated version of The Great Controversy in the mail. I want to thank you for making these books readable to the modern Adventist and for sending them out as a gift. I loved The NKJV Desire of Ages. It brought Christ to life for me. I had tried reading the original version many times, but never was able to get into the book. I am assuming that this new book will bring the battle for my soul to life in much the same way. I look forward to reading this book in the new year.

Adrienne, via e-mail

Thank you for your article "When Angels Sing" (Let's Talk, December 2009). It is such an encouragement to be reminded of God's ability to accomplish that which He has set out to do.

PERSPECTIVE

God Got His Lawn Mower Back

When someone stole a riding lawn mower from the storage shed at the Yelm (Wash.) Adventist Church on or around March 11 last year, they didn't reckon on divine intervention. Di Chappell, church office manager, related this story to the GLEANER.

Feeling moved to use the new church sign, a church member put out the plea on the church's outdoor signboard on Friday the 13th.

Sabbath morning, a woman who had seen the sign called the church just before services began. The mower was in her field. Apparently her neighbor had stolen the rig and was in the process of trying to sell it when he was arrested by federal police on other charges. The woman took the mower, parked it on her property and called the police and the church.

Ben Lewis, head elder, who went to recover the mower, came back all smiles. It seems the mower had two flat tires when stolen but now sported two "like new" tires. Chappell says, "God must have a sense of rethinking

STEWARDSHIP

Simple Spirit

EDITORS' NOTE: In the second installment of this year's emphasis on Rethinking Stewardship, we take a look at how good stewardship begins with a personal commitment to giving and living your life for Christ.

*"Be like Jesus, this my song,
In the home and in the throng;
Be like Jesus all day long,
I would be like Jesus."*

Is this just a well-known hymn or can it be a well-known experience in our lives? What does it take to be a joyful, fully-devoted disciple rather than a bump-along-through-life church member?

Acts 2 gives us some important clues. At the end of his powerful prophetic sermon (Acts 2:14–36) Peter says "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of your sins. And you will receive the gift of the Holy Spirit," (Acts 2:38).

To begin our spiritual growth we need to repent and be baptized. This is the God-given way to admit we have been living a self-absorbed life. We now want to live a Christ-centered life and we are willing to be part of God's prophetic movement on earth. When this is done we are promised tremendous resources for our spiritual growth — forgiveness of our sins (all of them) and the gift of the Holy Spirit (all the power we'll ever need).

We learn important lessons about spiritual growth from the experience of the early believers described in Acts 2.

Ten ideas for Spiritual Growth

Growing spiritually is the work of a lifetime. Pick something on the list and take another step forward ...

1. Repent of a self-absorbed lifestyle and be baptized for the forgiveness of your sins and to receive the Holy Spirit.
2. Pick a regular time, place and plan for personal Bible study, prayer and praise.

steps for tual Growth

“They devoted themselves to the apostles’ teachings and to the fellowship, to the breaking of bread and to prayer ... Every day they continued to meet together in the temple courts. They broke bread in their homes and ate together with glad and sincere hearts, praising God and enjoying the favor of all the people. And the Lord added to their number daily those who were being saved,” (Acts 2:41–42, 46–47).

In this short example are several activities that will also help us in our own spiritual journey.

Apostles Teaching

What did the apostles teach? They taught everything Jesus commanded them to teach, which was all the Scriptures, (Matthew 28:19–20) and in a very Christ-centered way (Acts 5:42). To grow daily we need to devote ourselves to daily Bible study, looking for Jesus in all the Scriptures (Isaiah 28:13) and asking the Holy Spirit to transform us (Romans 12:1–2) and give us wisdom (James 1:5).

Fellowship

We cannot really grow spiritually unless we are in fellowship with other believers — not only worshipping together but eating together, praying together and meeting the needs of other believers (Acts 2:44–45). Getting together frequently with other believers at the church and in homes (Acts 2:46) will become more and more important the closer we get to the Second Coming of Jesus (Hebrews 10:24–25).

Glad and Sincere Hearts

Life was difficult for the early believers but they were known as people who had “glad and sincere hearts,” who “praised God” regardless of circumstances. We grow spiritually when we think about

God and then thank Him in our hearts and with our lips for who He is, what He has done and what He has promised to do.

Outreach Growth

Acts 2 says “the Lord added to their number.” The early church grew in both faith and numbers (Acts 16:5) because it was a missionary-minded church.

“Let not believers center their thoughts upon themselves. Let them go to work for others, forgetting self in the loving desire to help those around them. Let them think and plan and work for those who know not God.”¹

Ellen White also reminds us “there is no greater bliss on this side of heaven than in winning souls to Christ.”² It’s at the divinely-designed core of personal spiritual growth. When we stretch beyond ourselves to reach others, we inadvertently reap a rich harvest in our own lives. •

3. Add 10 minutes to your daily time with Jesus in Bible study and prayer this week.
4. Invite a family or two from your church over to your house for a meal and sharing time.
5. Find someone in need in your church family or community and meet the need.
6. Join or start a home Bible study group.
7. Fast from something this week (e.g. bad habit or good hobby) so you will be more available to be used by God.
8. Make a new list of 10 things you are thankful for each day this week.
9. Make a prayer list of people you would like to invite to accept Jesus.
10. Invite someone to be your prayer partner this week.

Los Secretos de la Vida Traen Esperanza a Miles de Personas

Esperanza tenía todo a su favor. Tenía una familia hermosa, bonita casa, excelente salud y un restaurante Mexicano muy exitoso y próspero. Ella trabajaba largas horas para mantener su negocio a flote pero aunque sentía que aparentemente tenía todo a su favor todavía sentía que le faltaba algo. Ella sentía que su vida necesitaba tener más propósito. Se sentía vacía, sola y hambrienta espiritualmente. Ella sabía que necesitaba a Dios en su vida pero no tenía tiempo para El. Su negocio la mantenía tan ocupada que casi no tenía tiempo ni para su familia y mucho menos para la iglesia. Un día cuando estaba atendiendo a sus clientes en su restaurante se dio cuenta que lo que ella necesitaba en su vida era una relación significativa con Jesucristo. Esperanza fue una de más de 350 personas que encontró esperanza y fue bautizada en la Unión del Pacífico Norte durante la Campaña Evangelística RED 2009, de la División Norteamericana que se llevó a cabo desde Portland, Ore., Oct. 23-31, 2009 con el pastor Ramón Canals. Realmente fue impresionante ver la cantidad de hermanos laicos y pastores que participaron activamente de estas reuniones en nuestra Union y también a través de toda la División. La conferencia de Washington reporta que tuvieron más de 100 centros de predicación con una asistencia de 5 a 20 personas en cada grupo. Muchos de estos ya fueron bautizados y otros se están preparando para el bautismo. Lo interesante de esta campaña es que no solamente las iglesias Adventistas participaron sino que también los hermanos de Fe Pentecostal disfrutaron de los temas y varias familias fueron bautizadas. La Conferencia de Upper Columbia también participó activamente de esta campaña y nos reportan que este último Sábado se bautizaron cuatro

(ex) pentecostales más como fruto de la RED 2009. Al bautismo asistieron cuatro familias pentecostales que quedaron muy emocionadas con los "Secretos de la Vida" y ahora están pidiendo las antenas de Esperanza TV para instalarlas en sus casas. La iglesia de Mattawa es una de las iglesias más beneficiadas en la Conferencia de Upper Columbia con esta Campaña Evangelística. Hoy día se están reuniendo cerca de 80 personas cada Sábado para adorar a nuestro Dios, lo que indica un crecimiento de casi 100% en un año. Le damos honra y gloria a nuestro Dios por estas almas que desearon encontrar la esperanza que solo Dios puede dar. •

GC Youth Director Speaks to Young Alaskans

The first-ever Alaskan Youth Summit was held at Anchorage Junior Academy Oct. 30–31, 2009. Organization was provided by the Alaska Youth Ministries. The event was designed to address youth development needs, promote leadership skills, enable and empower youth to partner in the church mission. The event also provided a venue for a military appreciation ceremony in honor of men and women in uniform losing their lives while fighting for freedom and to commend thousands of Adventists in uniform. A tearful one-minute silence touched hearts as the audience reflected on the horrors of war and violence.

Friday vespers opened with Masai Fanene, an Alaskan Youth leader from the Anchorage Samoan Church. Fanene also led the Samoan choral group. Rona Hodges, of the Kenai AY, stressed the importance of empowering youth leadership while Miracle Ulisese, of the Samoan AY, talked about witnessing. Roby Teeling, a youth leader from Wasilla, Alaska, shared the value of being alert from the constant attack of the enemy.

The Sabbath morning Youth Empowered to Serve emphasis on community outreach, civic engagement and volunteerism, was presented by Ephraim Palmero, Alaska Conference Youth Ministries director.

Baraka Muganda, World Church Youth Ministries director, challenged more than 320 youth and young adults to “share our testimony and less of ourselves.” Muganda hailed the theme “Reflecting His Radiance” and advocated its application. Ric Palacios, Texas Conference pastor; Dennis Tello, Central California Conference pastor; and Bill Kasper, Alaska Conference pastor; provided the Sabbath afternoon sessions with inspirational messages and best-practice witnessing experiences.

“Yes, we would like this to happen again!” was a chorus among young people who attended.

The showcase of youth talents and skills enhanced a unified spirit of commitment, confidence, love and loyalty to the church. •

Bristol Bay Mission School Still Has an Impact

Forty years after the mission school in Aleknagik, Alaska, closed, its impact continues. Fred Davis attended there as a teenager in the 1960s from the village of Selawik, Alaska. He was baptized early on, but with subsequent struggles and victories over addictions, he recently expressed a desire to renew his commitment. Davis gave a public witness to God and his village by rebaptism on the first Sabbath of the new year January 2010.

Speaks Out for Christ

I paused, my eyes dancing and my hands in the air, mid-motion. The children leaned forward eagerly awaiting the answer to my question. As speaker for the Sept. 14–18, 2009, Week of Prayer at Caldwell (Idaho) Adventist Elementary School, I was enjoying every minute of it. Finishing my talk, I reiterated the points of the last several days. I broke the 76 students up into groups by class and invited them to pray together. This happened every day for five days.

To reinforce my point and give the children something to remember, I donned a different costume every day. During Wednesday's theme for example, I told of today's superheroes, why Jesus is the best superhero of all time, and how we can be superheroes for Christ. I wore the cape, mask, boots, and elbow-length gloves of the common superhero, not to mention the notes and the Bible.

When my planned musical help bailed right before the week began, I was grateful two capable musicians: James Fesler, assistant chaplain; and Kelsey Fleming, a fellow classmate; volunteered to help.

Several weeks later, a little boy approached me at a local church and exclaimed: "Hey! I remember you! You are Robin Hood, and a cowgirl, and a superhero, and an Indian, and the princess!" I instantly knew he was a student at Caldwell. "That was so much fun!" he reflected with a wide smile.

The February before, I was one of the speakers for a Gem State Academy evangelistic series. That experience stirred a passion for preaching within me. Now I always want the Spirit with me, using me to speak for Jesus. •

Middleton Church Celebrates

Baptisms in New Building

On Nov. 21, 2009, the Middleton (Idaho) Seventh-day Adventist Church celebrated its first baptism in their new building. Alvin Schnell, head elder, baptized Charles and Frances Cortez. He also baptized his son-in-law, David Robertson.

Special guests for the occasion included Robertson's parents from California. Harold Dixon, Idaho Conference treasurer, led the singing. A special guest, Eleanor Lay, who is 97 years old, was instrumental in introducing Charlie and Frances to the Adventist church when they were beginning a spiritual search.

Ann Hay was also a guest on this special Sabbath. She and her husband, Bob, donated a grand piano to the church in memory of their son, who died two years ago.

This is just one more exciting milestone for the Middleton Church. •

Great Falls Harvest Party

One of the favorite social events in the Great Falls (Mont.) Church is the annual harvest party, sponsored by the Five Falls Christian School. Over the years, members have had everything from bake sales to carnivals.

This year was no exception with a barn party planned by the Christina Clark, Home and School leader.

The grand march was led by the Great Falls, Mont., young people.

Philip and Shelby Vercio, church members and school parents, graciously allowed the use of their horse barn. Clark and a crew of helpers transformed the barn into an autumnal wonderland complete with hay bales, garlands, streamers, branches wrapped with lights and 130 pumpkins. Members and school families brought caramel apples and treats. The school provided hot mulled apple cider and fresh popcorn. With 50 mph wind gusts, a hayride and bonfire were out of the question but event planners were ready with a back-up plan.

The evening was spent playing standard harvest party games: musical chairs, wheelbarrow races, pumpkin-rolling relays and a good old-fashioned

Billings Features All-Youth All-Night Lock-in

Following an outpouring of requests for more youth programs and activities, the Billings (Mont.) Adventist Church made plans for an all-youth, all-night lock-in at the church on Oct. 31, 2009. It was set to begin immediately following the first family/game night of the year. The family activities began at 6 p.m. and the lock-in began at 9.

The lock-in began with snacks and a short DVD worship presentation. The presentation asked the question "Why Jesus?" Following the DVD Brad Brown, pastor; and Craig Leach, Billings youth director; lead out in a discussion. This was followed by some singing with guitars, campfire style, and a get-better-acquainted-activity. The activity required youth to discover answers to four questions about someone they were paired with at random. Later in the evening, they had opportunity to test their memories. In addition, youth got moving in an attempt at a grand march followed by some volleyball. The volleyball continued until everyone was thoroughly tired out.

The last thing before bedtime, everyone watched Over the Hedge. Everyone then hit the sack around midnight, and it was "lights out."

Volunteers arrived early the next morning to prepare a breakfast including pancakes with peaches, eggs and potatoes. Many thanks go to the volunteers who provided the feast.

Following breakfast, parents began to arrive to pick up their children. There was no shortage of energy exhibited in spite of their late night. •

Secrets of Life Brings Hope to Thousands

Esperanza had a beautiful family, a nice home, excellent health and a prosperous Mexican restaurant. But she was still lacking something. Empty, lonely and spiritually starved, she knew she needed God in her life, but her business kept her so busy she barely had time for her family, let alone church. One day as she served customers, she realized she needed a meaningful relationship with Jesus Christ. Esperanza, whose name means hope, is one of more than 350 people baptized in the North Pacific Union during the NAD Hispanic NET meetings held Oct. 23–31, 2009, from Portland, Ore. The satellite series was titled: SECRETOS DE LA VIDA with Ramon J. Canals, NPUC evangelist. The meetings were aired by Esperanza TV throughout the North American Division and other countries. The meetings were a result of the combined and united work of lay people, pastors and church administrators at all levels. More than 500 small group leaders were trained to invite friends to their homes, teach Bible studies and prepare people for the meetings. More than 500 satellite dishes were purchased and installed in homes and churches, including 11 Pentecostal homes. Hispanic pastors and church leaders had a goal of baptizing 1,500 people. Additionally, they wanted to train 500 small group leaders and plant five churches. As part of their strategy, that same week, they offered free medical services to the community. More than 1,200 people were given medical care during the day. Services included diabetes and cholesterol testing, medical and dental exams, eye examinations, chiropractic treatments as well as cooking and preventive medicine classes. Organizations that participated included: Pacific University Optometrist Department, Tuality Healthcare — Salud Services, Medical Teams International and Calderon Chiropractic Clinic, as well as several doctors and volunteers from private institutions. Nearly 200 people from the community were lined up for registration two hours before the nightly meetings. About 50 percent of those who came for medical reasons stayed for the meetings. Now Esperanza and thousands of people across North America have hope in the second coming of the Lord. •

Follow the Star in Gladstone

For eight years, the Gladstone (Ore.) Campground has hosted Follow the Star. Beginning in September, volunteers begin setting up seven scenes. Conceived by Gladstone Park Church members, the event provides a visual enactment of Luke's story of Jesus' birth. Cumulative attendance records show more than thirty-thousand guests have experienced the event, complete with more than 120 actors, portraying shepherds, shop keepers, priests, angels, King Herod, Roman soldiers and wise men. There are also live sheep, horses and a llama. Though directed through the Gladstone Church, the outreach would not be what it is without the commitment of members from at least a dozen area churches. Learning lines and braving weather for five or six hours a night, is a commitment.

We do not know how many, of the record setting number of more than 4,700 guests this year, came for the first time, but believe it was likely close to half. Many returnees brought friends and relatives back with them.

One mother writes, "This is the fourth year my family has come... It is a tradition we all look forward too. Our daughter has been coming since she was two and can hardly wait to see baby Jesus at the end. The look on her face is truly magical when she sees Him while the angel sings." Another writes, "We like the fact that you follow the story in the Bible and make it interesting so that both adults and young children can enjoy it. Thank you for that."

Follow the Star is a ministry presenting the reality of Jesus' birth to thousands each year as well as a witness to the community of who Seventh-day Adventists are. New friendships are made each December and many doors are opened throughout the year when we mention that we are the ones who bring them Follow the Star each year.

Plan to attend next December. Come early to get your free tickets and enjoy the many guest musicians who perform in the Holden Center each evening while waiting for your tour group number to be called.

Baptism Highlights Springfield Christmas Program

The baptism of a smiling, Linda Pelkey was the peak of a high Sabbath in Springfield, Ore., Dec. 19, 2009. This was Lutz Binus' first baptism as new pastor to Springfield Church. Violins, little angels guarding a baby Jesus, readings, voices raised in carols, and praise accompanied ushering in a new member. A special welcome dinner was held after church in honor of Pelkey's baptism.

As a child, Pelkey attended church per her parents' insistence, although they did not attend with her. Her childhood pastor asked her annually if she was ready to give her heart fully to the Lord. At age 13 she said, Linda Pelkey, newly baptized member, stands with Lutz Binus, new pastor of the Springfield (Ore.) Church.

"Yes, I do love Jesus and want to live for Him." She was baptized, but as school and family influences pulled, her faith drifted. When her marriage ended in divorce, she once again started seeking God and the surety and peace she found in Him as a young person. She made some Adventist friends, James and Caroline McHan, and attended the church women's retreat in Florence, Ore., this past year. "This is when I really decided this is where the Lord wants me. The women were so kind, lovely and caring. The Lord's love shone through them," she says.

To be baptized on a Sabbath with holiday music and praise, was an appropriate and fitting gift to God on the day celebrating His birth on earth. •

Portland Adventist Academy Moves to Lose

Teachers and faculty at Portland Adventist Academy participated in a friendly competition resulting in a weight loss of 115 pounds by 24 staff members over a ten-week period.

The "Move It or Lose It" challenge was created by religion department teachers Stephen Lundquist, Greg Phillips and Les Zollbrecht. They hoped to inspire coworkers to get more activity, lose extra pounds and build friendships through teamwork.

The challenge was accepted and taken quite seriously. Several mornings Tim Erich, Social Studies department chair, rode his bike over 20 miles to school. Others climbed mountains, kayaked, hiked and jogged.

"One of the greatest things about it was that it built camaraderie," says Phillips who lost 12 pounds. "It gave us something else to talk about besides the stresses of school."

Heidi Woodworth, Development and Alumni director and a member of the winning team, lost 18 pounds and loved the challenge. "It's a lot easier to be motivated when it becomes a friendly competition and you have a team supporting you." •

Deliver Delicious Holiday Cheer

Members of the Woodland (Wash.) Church spread holiday cheer by providing delicious Thanksgiving and Christmas meals for local families in 2009.

Since 2001, members have been preparing the meal boxes. What started as a small project in the women's ministries department has grown to involve nearly the entire congregation. This year Woodland Church volunteers prepared 59 boxes, providing meals for 211 people in the community.

"The need has grown every year," says Pam Bennett, church member, "and we keep growing to meet it."

Woodland (Wash.) Church members prepare 59 food boxes, giving families in the surrounding community an opportunity to cook special meals for Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Each box includes ingredients for several meals, fresh produce, recipes and a holiday card from the church. "Each box is made to order for a specific family," says Janice Ross, church member and founder of the project. "Some go to individuals and couples, while others go to families of eight."

Members donate food and money to supply a year-round pantry for those in need and to supply the holiday food box project.

"We used to deliver the boxes for Christmas," says Ross. "Now we get them out early so families can bake all through the holidays." •

"Amazing Grace" Recognized

For many years now, she has used her "spare" time to make t-shirts for missions and quilts for those in need. She also collects stuffed animals to give to children in the mission field. Many others have been enlisted by Mentzel along the way to help with her different mission projects.

"Amazing Grace," as her friends affectionately call her, was in a near fatal accident in 1999. Upon her miraculous recovery, she resumed volunteering and was quick to give God glory stating, "God isn't finished with me yet!"

Giving: The Lifeblood of Columbia Adventist Academy

At the end of a $6.2-million-dollar-capital-campaign tunnel at Columbia Adventist Academy, one might think it's all about the money, but that couldn't be further from the truth. A key component of Columbia's mission is "to develop students who are caring citizens with a desire to serve God and others."

Music groups; church worship leadership; elementary school worships; a Christmas program for local, underprivileged Head Start children; blood drives; Invisible Children Inc., an outreach to help create a safe learning environment for children in Uganda; mission trips to Appalachia with the Meadow Glade Adventist Church and to an orphanage in Mexico with International Children's Care; community service with the Family Education Center, Oregon Food Bank, Shepherd's door; and many other opportunities allow students to put Christianity into practice by becoming God's hands, feet and mouthpieces.

It isn't all "give" though. The school has received immeasurable gifts of time, energy and money from the school family and community. They've been inspired by Craig Blanchette, bronze medalist in the '88 Olympics, and Invisible Children "roadies" who encouraged them to step out of their comfort zones. They've also been blessed by the volunteers with Seniors in Action for God with Excellence who painted outbuildings to match the new facility, and volunteers who tutor students. And finally, they've been blessed by many donors, both named and anonymous, who have sacrificed generously for current and future students.

Giving is about a lifestyle, modeled by alumni and friends of CAA, and then transmitted. •

Milo Elementary Shares Christmas Around the World

Milo Adventist Elementary School has been studying Christmas in different countries. Each student chose a country and then made display boards which talked about the traditions of that country and brought special items to display.

On Dec. 14, 2009, the elementary school held an open house to share with the community what they learned. They all brought different Christmas foods. There was sushi from Japan; stollen and German spice cookies from Germany; and Russian teacakes from Russia. Karina Bovee brought Venezuelan bread filled with raisins, stipples and olives and Tyler Lambie shared cookies made into the shape of his initials.

The community turned out to share this experience with the students. Sandra Sumerlin, head teacher, was very proud of her students and the work they put into it. All were able to share what they learned. •

Carpenter in the Kitchen

Sharing Christ One Meal at a Time

An important component of reaching our community for Christ is finding ways to serve as His hands and feet. Our service to others builds relationships and opens hearts to the gospel. That's what Mike Linderman has discovered in his unique outreach in Moscow, Idaho.

For eight years, Linderman has served as executive chef (meal planning, ordering of food, soliciting food donations and organizing volunteers) for Moscow Friendly Neighbors, a senior meals ministry in Moscow, sponsored by the Area Agency on Aging. Twice a week, he helps provide 75–80 meals to the older population of Moscow.

Linderman, who averages more than 30 volunteer hours a week, humbly says, "I don't know much about cooking, but I leave it up to the Lord. I'm just a carpenter making meals. I'm impressed what to do, and I just do it. It sounds crazy, but it's amazing what the Lord will do when we just trust."

His service is making a difference for many Moscow residents. The diners say his nutritionally sound meals, which include four to five salads, "... are the best food around."

Linderman knows this community service is more than about food. He says, "It's the only social contact some of these older community members have!" In addition, he often gets requests he is not sure how to fill and is able to share his witness. "I tell them the Lord will provide, and He always seems to come through." •

A Birthday Party For Jesus!

Anchor Point's Christmas Gift

Anchor Point Church in Hermiston, Ore., annually celebrates Jesus' incarnation with a birthday party including special gifts toward local needs.

This year, Anchor Point decided on two worthy projects. Members heard a report from Jim Williams, Anchor Point Food Bank director, that they were unable to provide Thanksgiving dinner boxes to the families they serve. There would likely be a shortfall at Christmas. So members decided to give to the food bank to help needy families.

With this encouragement, Williams and his crew not only distributed full Christmas dinners to more than 60 appreciative families, but passed an extra $500 toward the second Anchor Point project — helping Hermiston High School students.

When members heard more than 50 of these high school students were homeless, they donated more than $1,000 to an anonymous effort, providing these homeless students with much needed basic clothing and other essential articles. •

Journey to Bethlehem Events Impact 7,400

Despite cold December 2009 temperatures, more people than ever took the Journey to Bethlehem in the Upper Columbia Conference. In addition to the familiar Hermiston, Ore., and Spokane, Wash., area events, Yakima, Wash., members put on their first JTB this year. In all, more than 7,400 visitors passed through the three JTB sites.

The JTB experience is designed to give visitors a realistic view of what life was like in Jesus' time. Visitors are taken on a journey back in time, arriving in the city on the night Jesus was born. They walk among buyers and sellers in shops, pay their taxes to the Romans at the tax office, inquire about lodging at an inn that is already full, and listen as an angel tells the shepherds where to find the ultimate Christmas gift — Jesus the Savior.

For church members it's a journey of faith because it takes months of preparation creating costumes and props, and hours of practice to act out the scenes. It's a group effort that can take as many as 300 volunteers and several area churches to put on.

"Sometimes during the process you feel like it is going to be a very expensive failure," says Nancy Engle, who has directed the event in Spokane for the last three years. "But God multiplies our efforts and things come together."

"When the Yakima Church board voted in April to present JTB, they knew it would be expensive and time-consuming," says Nita Hinman, Yakima Church communication leader. "But they felt inspired by those who had done it in the past."

Finding a church member to direct the event in Yakima was their first challenge. "Debbie Gilbert, one of our members who is a full-time nurse, turned the position down at first," says

A villager, Bob Meharry, barter with the net maker, Greg Baum, in the market place. Anchor Point, Hermiston, Heppner, Irrigon and Hermiston Spanish churches work together to create 2009's Journey to Bethlehem.

Hinman. "But after praying about it for a month, she was impressed to accept the major responsibility, and what a fabulous job she did. Our members felt the journey was a wonderful experience and a powerful evangelistic tool, and we hope to do it for many years to come."

Comments from those who make the journey indicate a powerful impact. Statements like, "that fed my soul," and "I'm coming to your church next week," are a delight for any pastor or church member, reminding them of this great opportunity to share the gospel message. •

Jordana GLOWS with True Happiness

When Jordana Ashburn read about “true happiness” she decided to try it out. Four years ago, Ashburn turned her life over to Christ and shortly after, she read these simple words in the book, Ministry of Healing, by Ellen White. “Remember that true joy can be found only in unselfish service.”

“I tried this quote out,” says Ashburn. “I told God I’d give Him a summer to find out if this was true.” So she went door to door, colporteur with Christian literature, and had amazing experiences.

“The positives far outweigh the fears of going,” she says. “Seeing people who need prayer and hearing them say, ‘Thank you so much for coming to my door’ makes it so worth it!” Ashburn is passionate about spreading the good news with people door to door and handing out Christian literature.

Before coming to the Upper Columbia Conference, Ashburn worked at Mountain View Academy in California as their assistant chaplain. “I interviewed for the UCC job,” says Ashburn, “but worried it would be a stretch. I knew the principal of the school would be unhappy if I left.” After the interview Ashburn says she was, “blown away by the potential in UCC to be a part of the new ‘Share the Life’ initiative and a movement of placing Bible workers in 66 districts.” So she made it a matter of prayer.

God answered through events that brought a qualified young lady to take her place and allowed the principal to change his mind. Ashburn is now coordinating GLOW, a literature program; helping to train Bible workers; and during the summer she will oversee Upper Columbia Youth Rush, a Magabook program where tuition. (Learn more about this program at www.uccsda.org/magabook.) Ashburn recommends going door to door to others. She says, “There are people waiting for you to come to their door. You will see your relationship with God grow a ton. I absolutely encourage people to try it out.”

Churches interested in GLOW can call Ashburn. She will take individuals out door to door to get them started. “The Holy Spirit is working behind this,” says Ashburn. “For me it is not a business. It is God-inspired happiness.” •

Tri-City Junior Academy Class

Feeds Hungry Children

When Tri-City Junior Academy's, in Pasco, Wash., first- and second-grade teacher, Verna Canaday, heard about the Adventist Development and Relief Agency's offer to match six dollars to every dollar donated for the cause of feeding hungry children in third world countries, she knew her students needed to get involved.

When Canaday shared the opportunity with the first- and second-graders, they decided they wanted to raise $200 to give to ADRA rather than exchange gifts among themselves. With their $200 added to the promised matching funds, they planned to end with a total of $1,400 — a large sum for a handful of children.

They hosted a school-wide bake sale that netted almost $175 for the campaign. This meant they only had to bring a dollar each on their party day to reach the goal. But instead of being content, they expanded their goal. They advertised their campaign and finished by bringing not only their own money but also additional offerings from church members and parents. In all, the students had gained $668.77. With the matching funds, TCJA students and their supporters raised a total of $4,681.39.

They are grateful to all who supported this vision, parents who baked, church members who opened wallets, and fellow students who gave up exchanging presents to help others instead. •

Yakima Church Celebrates Faith of Pioneers

In the summer of 1894, Elder S.H. Kime and several assistants held tent meetings in North Yakima, Wash. After the North Yakima meetings in 1894, Robert S. Donnell, conference president, reported: "At Yakima, the interest has been small, yet a few have taken their stand. We hope a church can be organized there in the near future." The next spring, March 30, 1895, his hope became a reality when the North Yakima Church was organized.

Almost 115 years later, Oct. 23–24, 2009, the Yakima Church celebrated the "Faith of Our Pioneers" with a heritage weekend, planned by the church history team: Jack Chambers, Vera Coleman, Bill Faith, Al McCoy, Bill and Velma Jean Robinson, Harry Sharley, the late Joan Whitehead and Virginia Young. The weekend began Friday afternoon with a tour of a historical site of church interest followed by a power point presentation by Doug Johnson, UCC vice president and historian, on the growth of the Adventist Church in the Pacific Northwest.

Bill Robinson led out as superintendent of an old-fashioned Sabbath School for which Vera Coleman gave the secretary's report. Her grandfather, Phil Eustace, purchased the North 11th Ave. church site and led out in the construction project. He also built the chairs, matching pulpit, and communion table still in use today. The congregation moved to the 11th Ave. site in 1918 and occupied that building for nearly 50 years.

Thanks to those early pioneers, the Yakima Church, has more than 300 active members and spiritual seekers, and is reaching out to benefit youth and their community, with an aim to "keep our eyes fixed on Jesus" and His soon coming. •

Holiday Outreach Nurtures Community Connections

Church holiday programs are becoming more purposeful in creating community connections as church members invite their neighbors, colleagues, acquaintances, and friends to attend a variety of Christmas and holiday programs across western Washington.

“Even in a secular society, there are a few times a year when people think about spiritual things,” says Bruce Koch, Washington Conference Ministerial director. “Christmas and Easter are prime opportunities to reach people with the gospel of Jesus who would not be open to it at any other time of the year.”

Music programs form the core of church and school holiday programs. Chehalis Church opens their doors to the community each Christmas for a sing-a-long performance of the Messiah. Olympia Christian School performed their 10th-annual holiday concert in the Capitol Rotunda with bells, chimes, strings, flute and children’s voices.

Dramatic performances are rising in popularity, and presenting more opportunities for interacting with the community. Auburn Academy Church and its partners presented Journey to Bethlehem where 6,200 people attended over six nights of the interactive outdoor drama. Elsewhere, the Cedarhome Church had continued success with their Walk-Thru Living Nativity.

Enumclaw Church, like many churches, hosts a Christmas breakfast followed by a music and drama performance about the story of redemption from the cradle to the cross. The family atmosphere is warm and welcoming allowing church members to feel comfortable inviting their friends and family. In all, 230 people attended the December 2009 breakfast and program — representing the highest church attendance of the year.

people worked together on this project and filled 91 boxes. The church plans to keep in contact with these organizations to provide support throughout the year. Many schools participated in the shoebox sharing program, Operation Christmas Child, with some schools even serving as community shoebox collection centers.

The holidays present a difficult time for people in grief, and two churches offered grief support programs. Monroe Church presented a GriefShare program called “Surviving the Holidays” that outlined ways to find strength, healing and tools for moving forward in the daily walk through grief. Similarly, Auburn Academy Church hosted a Blue Christmas program in conjunction with the local police and fire departments to honor the memory of lost loved ones during the holidays. •

AAA Students Host Christmas Party for Children

Enthusiasm and merriment filled the air as dozens of children piled off a school bus and flooded the cafeteria at Auburn Adventist Academy in mid-December 2009.

For the sixth consecutive year, AAA students hosted a Christmas party for underprivileged children. Considered one of the best Associated Student Body activities of the year, more than 75 academy students signed up to participate.

"I'll never forget seeing the little kids so excited about Santa," says Sean Leanhoff, a senior from Auburn, Wash. "When they saw the gifts and realized that they were for them, the kids were overjoyed."

In an effort to make a personal impact in the community, 40 children from underprivileged homes were invited to attend the celebration. Cookie decorating, coloring, playing "Pin the Nose on Rudolf," and sitting on Santa's knee were just a few of the festivities planned for them.

"Eighty percent of the kids' parents are unemployed," says John Spano, ASB sponsor and event coordinator. "For most of the children who attended, the gifts that our students gave were the only presents they would receive this Christmas."

As Auburn students celebrated the holiday season, they were reminded of why the gift of giving is so precious. "Throwing a party for these kids was special," says Marissa Masden, a senior from Kent, Wash. "We were giving them a Christmas they might not otherwise have received." •

Skagit Develops Caring Citizens

Skagit Adventist School in Burlington, Wash., implemented a service-oriented extra-curricular program this school year.

Every Wednesday afternoon, the school provides a service activity. As the program is completely voluntary, the volunteer groups are different each week with some students becoming regular volunteers.

Projects include yard work for a needy family, cooking and serving food at a local shelter, and marking storm drains for the county conservation office.

In addition, student volunteers washed fire engines and a police vehicle, distributed collection bags for holiday food

"I like to help other people," says Mariah Benedict, sixth-grade student. After the Skagit student volunteers helped a family who needed yard clean-up assistance, the family showed up for church to ask for more information about Seventh-day Adventists.

"It is fun doing construction and clearing work and I enjoy helping the community," says Jesse Paul, a seventh-grade student. "My favorite project was the yard work."

This outreach program has been a great way for the community to learn about Skagit Adventist School and North Cascade Church. Students are learning to be better stewards of God's creation and to be more responsible, caring citizens. •

Sequim Hosts Depression Recovery Seminar

Sequim (Wash.) Adventist Church wrapped up its first eight-week Dr. Neil Nedley's Depression Recovery Program in November 2009 with 19 participants receiving certificates of completion.

The church hosted a special evening — a cross between a celebration and a cleansing — to conclude the first eight-week program. Attractive tables, soft background music, and a crackling fire in the fireplace provided a welcoming atmosphere where attendees enjoyed a healthy dinner menu.

After the meal, Tim Guthrie, facilitator and medical professional, asked each participant to explain their feelings about the seminar. Some mentioned the crises they have faced, like the loss of loved ones, and how eating better and taking care of their bodies helped with the stress so they don't fall into a deep depression.

While the seminar is not anti-medicine, some reported they were able to lower the amount of medicine they needed to take for their condition. Participants leave the program with a new outlook on life after learning about the total package of healthy living.

One participant shared how she planned to end her life and decided this was the last opportunity to attempt to cope with life's challenges. Thanks to the seminar sessions, she now looks

Portland Embraces WWU Nursing Students

Last fall, Jonathan Russell, pastor, felt God telling him there was something to be done in Portland, Ore. Not sure how it applied to him, he kept quiet about it. Until he was offered a call. He accepted the position at Sunnyside Seventh-day Adventist Church in Portland, and after his first sermon there a church member approached him with an idea.

“The thought was to do something special to reach out to the nursing students on the Portland campus,” explains Russell. “The campus is right across the street from our church, so we wanted to reach out and welcome them to the neighborhood.”

It started as a simple worship and soup supper one Friday night a month, with bread night on Mondays for students to stop by for a between-classes pick-me-up and study break. It quickly grew to a group of 20 church members rotating on a schedule to provide a full dinner for the students on Monday nights.

“They give these young people a first-class feast every week,” says Russell. “Instead of a simple grab-and-go PBJ snack, there are anywhere from 15 to 20 students relaxing and enjoying a full meal.”

It isn’t just the Sunnyside Church that’s involved with this outreach. One night a month the Pleasant Valley Church moves its Bible study and worship to Hansen Hall, the women’s dormitory on WWU’s Portland campus.

The students have noticed the outreach. Now, instead of simply attending church services, some are becoming more involved at Sunnyside, leading song service, joining choir and reading scripture for services.

“We’re really trying hard to involve the students,” says Russell. “And they’ve responded by blessing us with their talents and time.”

Russell says they aren’t just targeting WWU’s nursing students. Any and all young adults in the Portland area are welcome to join them for worship and soup on the second Friday of every month in Hansen Hall.

JONATHAN RUSSELL
The number of young people attending the Friday-night worship and soup supper varies, but in December the group totaled nearly fifty.

“Sometimes it’s easy for pastors to take credit and say, ‘Look at the ministry I’m doing,’” says Russell. “In this situation I must say I had nothing to do with it. God did something crazy and I’m fortunate enough to go along for the ride. This has definitely grown much bigger than we ever thought it would when someone sat down in my office and said, ‘What if...?’”

The WWU School of Nursing offers a bachelor of science degree and currently has more than 120 students enrolled on the Portland campus, with an additional 160 registered nursing majors on the College Place, Wash., campus. A renovated library, new computer laboratory and a future classroom addition on the Portland campus will expand the nursing program by 60 students. •

AMC Patient Experiences Christ Walking the Halls

“Believe in the sun, even when it does not shine. Believe in love, even when you do not feel it. Believe in God, even when you do not see Him.”

— Hans Kung (adapted)

Unexplainable tragedy, endless pain, mystifying loss — at times in life, it may seem hard to see God. But even in our darkest hour, he is always there.

The spirit of Jesus Christ is felt by staff and patients in the hallways of Adventist Medical Center.

That’s the lesson Adventist Medical Center patient, Holli, learned this year. A juvenile court administrator, she lived with tremendous back pain for many years, undergoing some very aggressive surgeries in other hospitals that left her immobilized. At the same time, she dealt with several difficult personal situations throughout her life that left her feeling hopeless, skeptical of others and angry with God.

As Holli’s back pain continued to worsen, she and her partner, Joni, finally called for help. First talking to AMC neurologist Darrell Brett, M.D., they were soon referred to an orthopedic specialist, Timothy Treible, M.D.

Within minutes, Treible called Holli back, suggesting she come to his office that afternoon. Holli and Joni made the drive from Central Washington and within days, Treible and his colleague Jeffrey Boskind, M.D., performed the necessary procedures to help relieve her of pain. A few days after her second surgery, Holli started to move her legs in ways she hadn’t been able to in more than a year. Soon she was able to walk on her own, continuing her journey to recovery.

Throughout the procedures and recovery, Joni recalled someone once telling her that Christ walks the hallways of Adventist Medical Center. She hoped somehow Holli’s heart would be softened and receptive to the concept of faith. Joni said kiddingly, “Holli, if I run into Christ in the hallway I’m sending him directly to your room!”

Though originally joking, the change Joni saw in Holli during her eight-day stay was nothing short of a miracle. It began when Holli invited a chaplain into her room and asked for prayer. Her tough exterior melted away as she felt the genuine care and compassion of each caregiver.

Joni commented she didn’t care if her partner ever walked again, but she prayed her heart would be healed through the experience of interacting with the staff of this hospital.

“The staff that walks these hallways is amazing,” says Holli. “There’s something going on here that I’ve never experienced anywhere else.”

After experiencing the mission and spiritual culture of AMC for eight days, there’s no doubt in the minds of Holli and Joni that Christ really does walk the hallways of the hospital. They’ve met him there through the many people who ministered to their emotional, physical and mental needs. •

DAVIS 50TH

Kirby and Shirley (Van Der-schelden) Davis celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Aug. 23, 2009. They were married in Tonasket, Wash., on Aug. 23, 1959, one week after Kirby's graduation from Walla Walla College.

Kirby taught in Ritzville Adventist School the fall of 1959, then transferred to the Sunnyside (Wash.) Adventist School where both he and Shirley were the faculty for four years. Following that, they moved to Spokane, Wash., where Shirley attended Whitworth College, then graduated with the summer class of 1965 at Walla Walla College. Both were then employed at Spokane Jr. Academy.

In 1966, they traveled around the world. In Saigon they could hear the guns being fired at night. While in Jerusalem they received a call from Mark Olcott to teach at Kirkland (Wash.) Jr. Academy where they resided and taught for eleven years.

In 1977, they moved to Ferry County, Wash., where they designed and built their own home, helped start the Republic Adventist Church, and also started the church school in their home.

They are now both retired, having lived in Ferry County for 32 years. Shirley teaches a children's Sabbath School class. Kirby travels as much as possible and witnesses wherever he goes. They raise gardens and flowers, take walks, and participate in church activities. They enjoy bird watching and various aspects of nature study.

DIESNER 90TH

On Oct. 3, 2009, Bob Diesner celebrated his 90th birthday with his wife Frances McRae and his Tillamook (Ore.) Church family at a fellowship dinner.

Robert Schremser Diesner was born in Perry, Iowa, the youngest of five children. His father was the stationmaster of the railroad station. Robert's father died when he was 12. At 15 he was sent to Boston to live with an older married sister and her family. After graduating from high school, Bob worked in a chemical plant with his brother-in-law where dyes were manufactured, until at 22 he was drafted into the Army. Following his discharge from the service, he worked in shipyards in Long Beach and Mare Island, Calif., and eventually found himself living in Richland, Wash., employed by General Electric at what is now the Hanford Atomic Works.

Taking advantage of the G.I. Bill, he returned to Boston and enrolled in the Boston School of Accounting. Following graduation, Bob was employed by the federal government, the Atomic Energy Commission, where he worked for 17 years. He then formed his own business and worked as a tax accountant in Florida and North Carolina until he retired in 2002. Today, in spite of failing eyesight, he still manages his own stock portfolio.

Throughout his adult life, he was interested in religion and explored the beliefs of a number of denominations. Bob joined the Seventh-day Adventist Church following completion of a Bible course from It Is Written, and is still an enthusiastic Bible student.

SMITH 90TH

Ardis Smith celebrated his 90th birthday on June 27, 2009. Family and more than 150 friends came to the Laurelwood Academy grounds in Jasper, Ore., to celebrate with Ardis. They all camped and had a pot-luck dinner after a short Sabbath service.

Ardis Smith was born in Centralia, Wash., June 27, 1919. Ardis went to Auburn Academy, graduating in 1939. He worked at a cabinet shop with his father, and during WWII worked in heavy construction. He moved to Springfield, Ore., in 1948.

He drove a log truck for several years. He had his own company called C and S Logging Co. Then Ardis started building homes in Springfield and Eugene, Ore., and retired from construction, but worked with Maranatha building churches in Oregon and Washington. He ended with Mission Church Builders in California. The last one was the Palm Desert Church. Ardis has built several homes to live in.

He married Josephine Blake in June of 1950. She passed away in 1975 after a bout with cancer. She was the mother of his five children.

He and Ila Mae Fristad were married June 13, 1976. They have spent winters in Southern California and visiting their children. Ardis plays his accordion nearly every day for self entertainment.

What Are You Reaching For?

“Coveting was not officially permitted in Sabbath School, but I had nonetheless been honing for weeks a long-term attraction to a luscious-looking pear.”

I had been eying the iridescent green bottle on the top shelf of the linen closet for days. It was out of reach ... and therefore desirable. To my three-year-old eyes, the glass bottle of Bactine looked fascinating.

So it was one day, with my mother otherwise occupied, I made the ascent from base camp to summit, clawing upward past blankets and towels toward the prize at the top.

It looked even better in my hand. But every little tike assumes the best things in life come via the mouth. So, of course I drank the whole bottle. My mother found me wandering the hallway looking green and worried.

There was no 911 service available in those ancient days — we didn't even have a telephone. So we took a not-so-leisurely drive to the doctor's office where, up on the exam table, I vented the remaining fumes with a long, sonorous BURP, a practice I have since refined.

End of story: I experienced no other negative (or positive) effects from my experience. You might think the internal dousing of antiseptic would have immunized me against all future infections. No such luck. Nor was I immediately deterred from other questionable objects of desire.

In fact, a year or so later, curiosity again won out in Cradle Roll. Singing a little song about wonderful things God had made, the teacher brought around a plate with different sorts of fruit for us to hold during the song. Coveting was not officially permitted in Sabbath School, but I had nonetheless been honing for weeks a long-term attraction to a luscious-looking pear on that plate. Like the unfortunate cripple at the Pool of Bethesda, someone had always got to it first. But not this time. And while the teacher had her back turned, I took a surreptitious bite, and discovered (duh!) ... a wax pear no doubt handled by dozens of chubby hands over decades. It was awful, nasty and an abrupt education.

Early on I learned perceptions can be skewed. What you think you see is not always what you get. What you reach for can be a snare. What you want is not always best. The Bible is replete with examples.

Eve got her apple. Esau got his lentils. Moses got his water. David got Bathsheba. But they all lost so much more in the “getting.”

If, as Ellen White observes, God's ideal is “higher than the highest human thought,” perhaps their problem and our problem is in allowing misguided desire to limit our reach. God's word comes ringing down through the ages, still true: “Why do you spend money for what is not bread, and your wages for what does not satisfy?” (Isaiah 55:2, NKJV)
