"Nunawading Adventist College, Victoria, is leading the way in technology as the first Adventist school to release a multimedia CD attached to their school magazine," says deputy principal Jacques Calais.

School magazine goes digital

Bruce Manners

Munawading Adventist College (NAC), Victoria, is leading the way with technology in Adventist schools with the release of a multimedia CD attached to their annual school magazine Images.

Deputy principal and school magazine editor Jacques Calais says, "We wanted to do something innovative and appealing for the students. For years we've taken video footage of the school year, but then it just gets stored in the archives. It was time to take a bold step into the unknown and try something different."

The CD contains more than half-an-hour of video highlights from the year, along with a short video message of farewell from each Year 12 student and more photos. "Looking at a static magazine is great," says Mr Calais, "but the CD has added so much more. The students and staff have been very receptive to the new format. Now they not only have a magazine to look back on, but they can actually see and hear what life was like at NAC in 2002."

Under the direction of information technology department head Brendyn Hancock, NAC has worked hard over the past few years to build a technology infrastructure that provides a seamlesss learning environment between home and school. Mr Hancock says, "The Images CD is a continuation of our commitment to improve communication between the college and the community it serves."

Sanitarium buys out Soyaworld

Julie Praestiin, Berkeley Vale, NSW

Sanitarium's CEO, Kevin Jackson, recently announced the company's successful purchase of Soyaworld in Canada.

"On entering the initial agreement we purchased half of the business and also negotiated an option to buy the remaining part of the company. We have now exercised our option to purchase the remaining 53 per cent of Soyaworld and, as such, we now own 100 per cent of the Canadian company" said Mr Jackson on announcing the takeover.

Since commencing the joint venture with Soyaworld two years ago—to produce So Good—the company has established a 60 per cent share of the soymilk market in Canada. Its current sales turnover is around $A46 million ($NZ53 million), with expectations for this to grow a further 20 per cent in the coming year.

"This company is profitable, growing rapidly and is something we can all be proud of," says Mr Jackson. "We believe it will become a significantly larger part of our overall business in the coming years as we look at expanding the product range that the business currently offers, and also look at strategies to enter the wider North American market."

Aussie accountants balance books in Papua New Guinea

Brenton Stacey

Twelve finance officers from Australia have voluntarily helped the Adventist church in Papua New Guinea (PNG) balance its books.

The team balanced the books of half the church's 10 missions, three of its educational institutions and two of its Adventist Book Centres. But they worked 1500 hours over two weeks to do it.

Doug Burns—an accountant at Signs Publishing Company, who travelled with three of the officers to Port Moresby, while others travelled to Lae and Kokopo—describes the state of the accounts as "disappointing."

Four of the officers were visiting PNG for the first time. "The fly'n'account helped them experience some of the everyday frustrations, such as lack of banking and commercial documentation and power outages, our mission accountants have to cope with," says Allan Butler, the school finance and information technology manager for the Australian Union Conference.

Although the volunteers worked from 8 am until midnight every day but Saturday, "We enjoyed the experience and feel we made a tangible contribution," says Mr Burns.

Fire victims benefit from ADRA funds

The Adventist Development and Relief Agency (ADRA) has provided $A30,000 to assist victims of the NSW bushfires who may not be covered by other forms of government compensation.

As with previous disasters within Australia, ADRA officers will work with the NSW Department of Community Services to locate and assist those who fall between the cracks of insurance and other forms of government assistance.

Gary Christian, ADRA's national program director, believes that the fires could not have come at a worse time, but that ADRA was still able to offer some Christmas cheer for the people affected.

"There are always people with special circumstances who will miss out on various forms of government support, but whose needs are nevertheless very genuine," he said, "and these are the people we will seek to identify and then assist."

Close call for Adventist church in NSW bushfires

Only one year after shifting into their new premises—built after an arsonist burned their previous building to the ground three years ago—Toronto church, NSW, was again threatened by fire, only this time from bushfires. On November 26 a bushfire spread to residential areas west of Lake Macquarie and eventually surrounded the Toronto church and school complex, burning within 50 metres of the buildings. Church members who lived nearby, along with firefighters, battled the flames for several hours before the danger was past.—Michelle Coltheart

LE sales rise during 2002

iterature evangelist book sales exceeded expectations for the financial year ending in 2002, reports Pastor Terry Goltz, publishing director for the South Pacific Division (SPD). "Sales have been excellent; it's been our best year ever."

Literature evangelist (LE) book sales in the SPD have increased a substantial 8.3 per cent over the previous year, breaking the $A2.8 million mark. That is an 82 per cent increase since 1996-97.

The year 2002 has been a strong one in Australia and New Zealand, with more than $A2.2 million in sales. Pastor Goltz attributes these record-breaking achievements to several factors. A number of new career LEs have been recruited. They have been aided by a financial-assistance package available to new LEs. A directdebit system has been utilised, meaning people can buy books and pay in easy instalments.

Major highlights during 2001-02 for the Publishing Department have included the introduction of three new products: an updated The Bible Story book set; new medicinal plant and nutritional book sets from Spain; and a series of The Bible Story audio CDs.

Pastor Goltz hopes these new products will bring increased sales during 2003, especially the new medicinal plants and nutritional book sets, because they cater for a growing desire in the community for natural remedy solutions to medical concerns.

The year has also brought a new presence on the Internet in the form of two new web sites. The first, <www.hhes.com.au>, is the commercial online outlet for the Publishing Department, advertising books and evangelistic material for sale. The second, <www.see-le.com>, is a webpage for church members.

The second web site allows readers to read information about LEs, contains the latest LE stories and is kept up to date with current LE developments. "Hopefully," says Pastor Goltz, "this will also create a platform for recruiting new LEs."

He reports that during 2001-02 there were three "outstanding firsts" in the history of Australia-New Zealand literature evangelism. Eric Hoare, LE, delivered more than $A212,000 worth of books, setting a new sales record for the SPD. In the western and central area, LEs in total delivered more than $A700,000 of literature. Also the first area manager has been appointed for French Polynesia and New Caledonia.

Pastor Goltz also reports an increase in what he calls "second-mile service"taking people the second mile toward Christ. The number of baptisms of customers during 2001-02 rose to 158. This, he adds, is only a reflection of how many people are influenced and are finally baptised. More than 1000 homes were opened for Bible study, and an increased number, 3038, enrolled in correspondence courses.

To illustrate the impact of LEs in the homes he tells the story of a woman who had bought several books from a local LE and had showed an interest in the material read. When the LE asked her if she would like to go to church she gave her a big hug and thanked her for the invitation.

She then asked she could invite some of her friends as well. So, on Sabbath, two car loads of non-Adventists showed up to the church, thanks to the one invitation made by the LE.

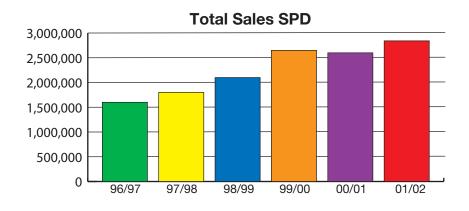

In looking to the future, Pastor Goltz hopes that 2003 will see sales in the division break $A3 million, and in five years time he expects that total sales will be more than $A3.5 million. He believes that the introduction of new material, in the form of books, audio products and videos, will continue the steady growth at about 8.3 per cent per annum.

One of the advantages of new material is that they help retain existing customer interest while introducing others to Christ through new products. With the growing success of the LE program, he expects greater growth as more people discover that it is a financially viable ministry and want to become involved.

For the future, Pastor Goltz has a burden to see a strong LE work in Tasmania. Currently there are no career LEs on the island. He also wants to see the reintroduction of the student LE program-where Avondale College and university students worked as LEs during their holidays.

He feels it is important that the Publishing Department works toward keeping a well-defined presence on the internet, and providing products relevant to the market.

For the future, he says, "There are still places for literature evangelists to serve, and I believe that God is still calling people to the task.'

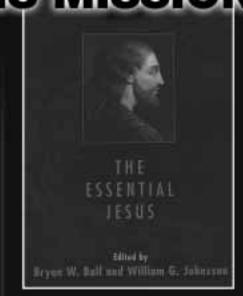

THE MESSAGE, HIS MISSION

The Essential Jesus Edited by Bryan W Ball and William G Johnsson

"I am convinced the time is right for this book."—Dr Jan Paulsen, President, General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists

The Essential Jesus is a thoughtful look at the relevancy of the Saviour for today—and a defence of the biblical, historical viewpoint.

Editors Bryan W Ball and William G Johnsson have assembled the writings of 10 scholars, besides themselves, who are passionate believers in Jesus into this one powerful volume on the man, the message and the mission of Christ.

Who was Jesus? Are the Gospel accounts of His birth, life, death and teachings reliable? Why did He die? Did He really rise from the dead? Does Jesus have a future? Will He come again?

Does he still call men, women and young people to discipleship,
and, if so, what does he expect of those who respond? These and other crucial questions are addressed and answered in this book that is written for all people who still believe that Jesus brings relevance, meaning and purpose to this life and the one to come.

More on old or young earth

The following letters continue discussion on the age of the earth at Creation that began with the article "In the shadow of Galileo" (October 5) and the letter "An old earth: Theory or fact?" (November 2).

Ken Davey (Pastor), Qld

The concept of an old age for the earth lines up with a number of books that have, over the past 25 years, stirred up these so-called geological problems and undermined faith in the Bible for many. The Bible recognises no long ages in which the earth evolved. At the end of that first week it says, "This is the account of the heavens and the earth when they were created" (Genesis 2:4, NIV, emphasis added).

Rapid geomorphological development, not evolution, can be seen in many world locations as in the volcanic island of Surtsey off Iceland, which was produced in an eruption during 1963. Within a period of months this sterile, virgin rock was transformed into a "mature" island.

Valda Parkinson, Vic

Is anybody really inferring that God, who is from "everlasting to everlasting," did not have even a cold, wet cloud to sit on until 6000 or so years ago? What utter nonsense! What was the "deep" and "waters" that the Spirit of God moved on (Genesis 1:2)?

Glyn Parfitt, Qld

While a considerable body of scientific data appears, at face value, to favour a long age for the substance of the earth, a growing amount of data is now pointing in the opposite direction.

Seventh-day Adventists have always believed that Scripture testifies of other worlds and galaxies created before our world. We have no need of theories of a change in the speed of light, which is far it holy. . . . For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is" (Exodus 20:8, 11, KJV). The rocks, the dust and the clay.

R Siemienowicz, Vic

If the sun was in place when God came to work on the formless and void matter, just what was created on day four as related in Genesis 1:14-19? Our views shouldn't come at the expense of Scripture.

Is the writer aware of the work of Dr R Humphreys, a nuclear physicist who has provided a possible scenario to reconcile a

Did [God] not have even a cold, wet cloud to sit on until 6000 or so years ago?

from proven. However, many find it impossible to sever Genesis 1:1 from the rest of Creation week because of the wording of the Sabbath command, "For in six days the Lord made the heavens and the earth . . ." (Exodus 20:11, NIV).

Alec C Thomson, Qld

I cannot believe there is such a diversity of opinion regarding the age of the earth. We once believed that we Adventists were people of the Book. Why has no-one quoted what the Lord wrote on tables of stone: "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep young earth with the "millions of years" needed for light to travel from distant galaxies? He provides an elegant set of relatavistic equations to support his concept. Numerous scientific observations seem to negate a solar system being eons of years old: for instance, the decay of the earth's magnetic field, the influx of magma from the mantle to the earth's crust and polonium halos.

Colin Waters (Dr), NSW

I was fascinated to read the physics in the Record where the writer repeats an old but fallacious fiddle with the speed of light. Scientists bring light to a halt the same way as everyone else—with a light switch.

Simplistic statements attempting to link the age of the universe with induced changes in the speed of light are inadequate and misleading. Most experts believe the universe is around 15 billion years old. The opinion of experts does not guarantee the truth—this also applies to many theological details. Based on the available evidence, fiddling with the speed of light to arrive at a young universe is not the answer.
